

Application forms available for groups seeking money

The University Program Council's Fund Allocation Committee is accepting applications for financing new campus groups, according to the program adviser for Campus Activities and Programs.

"There has only been one organization to use the available funding for this semester," Jackie Caventer said. "The Agriculture Advisory Board applied for funding for the Leadership Development Seminar."

Caventer said the funds, from student fees, are for new programs only and that CAN will process fund applications quickly.

Applications are available at the CAP offices in both the Nebraska Union and the East Campus Union.

"The committee meets, goes over the application to see if it is a recognized organization, to see if they have an adviser, and to see if they have received funding in the past four years," Caventer said.

She said an organization can receive funds only once every four years.

"The Board of Regents were very concerned about the money and so they have become very strict with the criteria for funding," Caventer said.

She said the application forms require a detailed cost breakdown of where and how money will be spent. CAP checks to see if the program is worthy and will benefit others, she said.

"Once we have approved the application, the chancellor must approve it and then the program is funded," Caventer said.
