

Leadership development seminar set for Friday

The UNL Institute of Agriculture and National Resources and the East Campus Ag Advisory Board will co-sponsor a seminar titled "A Leadership Development Seminars for Leaders of Student Organizations."

The seminar will be Friday in the East Campus Union. It is open to all UNL students, faculty and staff.

Mark Freese, vice president of the board, said, "the seminar will provide students and staff an opportunity to hear nationally known speakers in the field of leadership development."

Freese said in addition to providing the chance to acquire good ideas in leadership skills, the seminar will also direct emphasis on leadership at an individual's own level.

Program highlights include "Looking at Self in Preparation for Leadership," "Developing Effective Leadership within the Organization and the Institute," and "Using Leadership Skills at the Local Level."

Freese said program speakers will feature Lois Olive, clinical psychologist and visiting professor at UNL's Human Development and the Family Department, Burl Winchester, professor of Adult Education and Human Development at Montana State University; and Roger Sandman, director of Intergovernmental Affairs, Department of Agriculture, Washington, D.C.

Freese said Olive has served as a vocational consultant for the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare, and that Winchester has a national reputation as a consultant and workshop director in the areas of communications, motivation and leadership.

Sandman taught Vocational Agriculture at Wood River and served former Gov. J. James Exon as Deputy Secretary of Agriculture.

Representatives to attend meetings of student groups

To organize a strongly-supported state student association, ASUN's Government Liaison Committee is urging colleges throughout Nebraska to attend the 8th National Conference for State Student Associations.

UNL representatives from GLC and ASUN will attend the conference Oct. 24 through 26 at the University of Kansas, said Ann Block, GLC co-vice chairperson.

Block said the conference will sponsor various activities explaining how to organize a state student association. It will also provide information so that the association may better serve its constituents.

The ASUN and GLC representatives will attend the conference and the amount of money ASUN will provide is not known, Block said.

She said each representative will be required to pay some transportation, lodging and registration expenses, but exact costs are not known.
