

Clerk says student groups need sales permits

By Jim Garrett

Student Organizations that are involved in solicitation and fund raising causes should be aware of the permit ordinances Lincoln requires for these types of canvassing methods, said Deputy City Clerk Joan Ross.

Before selling a product, approval must be gained by submitting an application to the Solicitations Committee, according to the City Clerks Office.

Ross said the committee meets the second and fourth Tuesday of each month. She said the committee is comprised of five Lincolmites who have been recommended by the mayor and approved by the City Council.

Ross said 60 permits for various organizations and individuals were approved for the fiscal year (Sept. 1979 through Sept. 1980) by the committee.

Ross said the purpose of the permits is to ensure that bona fide organizations or individuals are the only ones allowed to solicit or peddle for monetary receipts in Lincoln.

She said the non-profit organization and peddler permits allow solicitations on private property only. This type would cover private property going door to door, but not property in between the home or business, she said.

Ross said a vendor's permit would be required for those doing business such as a push cart business on public property. She said these permits are entirely separate from the sidewalk cafe ordinance passed this summer by the city.

The clerks office said the permits range from $5 to $75, which covers such things as routine permit issuance and licensing.

Ross said that some of the extensive safeguards built into the permit application form deal with things like the estimated amount of money to be collected, the names of those distributing the receipts, an outline of methods used to conduct the solicitation, and the specific time range for the solicitation period.

Ross said the application questions are designed to check the organizations against fraud and not the product sold or the cause solicited for.

Ross mentioned that as far as student groups go, it is a very good idea to have a permit. She said each solicitor should be given a photocopy as identification and proof of approval.

Ross said even though the clerk's office approves a permit for an individual or cause, it does not mean the city is endorsing the individual, organization or product.

No permit is required, nor are there any property restrictions imposed on an organization or individual that is giving something out for free, Ross said, such as in the case of advertisements in plastic cuts or fliers that are distributed.
