

Squad quality leads to selection

Last April, UNL was selected as the national headquarters for the Arnold Air Society. Steven Vick, Commander of AAS, said UNL was chosen "because of the people we have in our squad."

The AAS is affiliated with the ROTC and only members of ROTC are allowed to participate, Vick said.

"We are set up as an organization within ROTC. We are established as a charter for professionals because we are for the officers. Our goals are to promote ROTC and the Air Force itself," he said.

The AAS consists of six members: Vick as commander, John Armstrong as vice commander, Ray Oitman, operations, Warren Hingst, administrator, John Schuite, finance officer; and Pat Ferguson, public relations. All six members are seniors.

"Our job is to make sure that the jobs are getting done, and that there is cohesiveness. We will be responsible for the whole year. One of the service projects that we are doing this year is environmental awareness. We will be giving out energy tips and things of that nature."

The AAS headquarters will be located at UNL until next April, Vick said. At that time there will be a convention in Colorado Springs, Colo., where the new location of the headquarters will be announced.

"We made our presentation against the University of Southern California and the College of St. Thomas at the convention that was held at Dallas, Texas, last year," he said.
