

Klan-Nazi acquittal prompts today's demonstration

On Monday men allegedly identified as being members of the Ku Klux Klan and Nazi parties were found innocent of the murders of five demonstrators in Greensboro, N.C.

Tonight, at 8 in the Nebraska Union, a man close to that situation will be speaking on the effects of that acquittal, the tie-in between the Klan and the American government and how citizens can react against the rise of violence of such groups may perpetuate.

Nelson Johnson, known for his political activism and speeches in the South, is being brought to UNL by the Student Y. Coordinator Deresa Oliver who thought Johnson would benefit students because there is a need for people to be aware of Klan incidents.

"The government has given the Nazi's and the Klan a license to kill innocent people," Oliver said in reference to the trial.

"If the university wants to reach racial equality, they should take a stand on this."

Johnson's arrival on campus is part of the reason behind a demonstration against racism which the Afrikan People's and Progressive Students Union's will hold at noon at the Broyhill Fountain.

"The government has taken the side of bigotry and fascist murder," a press release said. "But we demand that they listen to the people."
