

Andrew Young to deliver MUN keynote speech

By Robin Lynch

Former U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations Andrew Young, has been named the keynote speaker at UNL's 14th annual Model United Nations conference, set for Feb. 11 through 14, according to MUN Chairman Steve Arkfeld.

Arkfeld said the conference, sponsored by the University Program Council, simulates the general assembly, security council, economic and social council, and international court of justice of the United Nations. Its 500 delegates debate international affairs.

This will be the second year in a row that the international court of justice, which is unique to UNL's model, will be conducted, Arkfeld said. He said that this added feature has increased the response from other universities.

Arkfeld said Young will be the only speaker at the conference, which starts Wednesday night and continues every day and evening until Saturday night. He added that after Young's speech Wednesday night, a reception will be held for the former ambassador and the delegates.

Young's trip to Nebraska, Arkfeld said, is sponsored by the Model United Nations committee, Talks and Topics, the chancellor's office, the UPC-Culture Center's entertainment and black special events committees, the College of Arts and Sciences, and the faculty convocations committee.

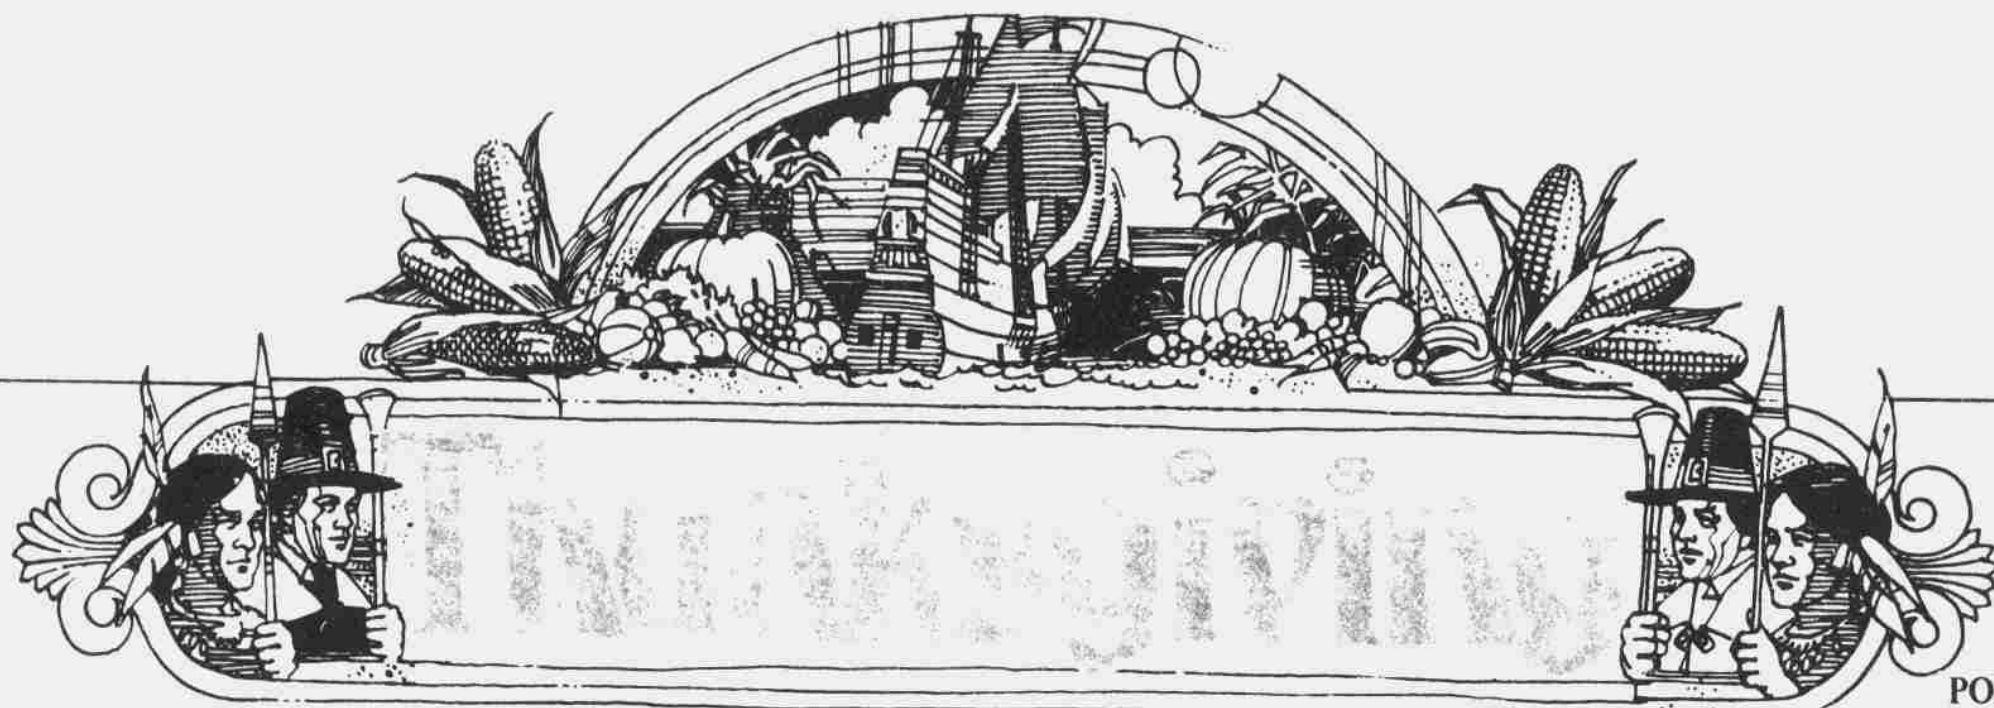

Arkfeld said Young also will speak to international relations students in a question-answer period during his stay.

Because UNL's model has grown in quality and respect throughout the Midwest, Arkfeld said, "We have been able to attract students from other states, which also increases participation from UNL students."

Arkfeld said some universities have student organizations which send students to the other 100 MUN conferences throughout the nation, but UNL students who wish to go to other schools' conferences must pay their own way.

Students who are interested in being delegates should turn in applications in room 200 Nebraska Union by Nov. 28.
