South desk to close temporarily

The south desk in the Nebraska Union will be closed temporarily from Dec. 1 until the beginning of Christmas vacation, the Union Board has decided. All south desk services will be available at the north desk during that period.

Union Board President Maynard Krantz said that the desk will be closed on an experimental basis. The union could save up to $5,000 in labor costs if the south desk were closed for the rest of the school year, he said.

If closing the south desk does not prove inconvenient to students, the board may consider closing it next semester, he said.

During the trial period, the south desk will serve as a free distribution area for magazines and newspapers such as the Nebraska Voice.

In other business, the board voted to continue serving 10 cent coffee and tea in the union during finals week, and to cut down on some labor during finals week.

The labor reduction will not affect student services, Krantz said.

Union Director Daryl Swanson gave a slide presentation on the renovation of the North Crib. The presentation was shown at Friday's meeting of the NU Board of Regents, when the Union Board presented its renovation proposal.

Correction

The Daily Nebraskan incorrectly reported Friday that Ann Block, a member of the ASUN Government Liaison Committee, said that GLC and ASUN senators were urging people to call Sen. James Exon's office to urge him to vote for the Senate portion of the national budget in the area of higher education funding.

Ann Block said ASUN and GLC were urging people to vote for the House version and not the Senate version.
