Early returns from survey indicate student approval of rec programs

By Kim Hachiya

The UNL recreation department is processing the results of a survey started last Wednesday.

Questionnaires were sent to 984 randomly selected students to help the department evaluate how its services are meeting the needs of students, recreation department Director Dan Steller said.

Early returns indicated students are generally pleased with recreation department programs.

A computer randomly chose 194 Greeks, 478 residence hall students and 312 off-campus residents to participate in the survey. Steller said more surveys were sent to residence hall students because they participate in more programs than other students, according to results of a survey taken three years ago.

The questionnaire asks students to rate the level of their satisfaction with intramurals, open gyms and courts, outdoor recreation, equipment rentals, recreational classes, hunting and fishing licenses and World of Fun tickets.

Other questions ask students to rate their level of awareness of department offerings and the importance they attach to department programs.

A fourth question asks students to evaluate the fairness of recreation department policies on intramurals, equipment rentals and off-campus trips.

Students are asked whether they agree the department and its services are an asset to UNL.

Steller said two important questions concern whether students feel the department offerings are adequate and whether the indoor recreational facilities are adequate.

Steller said the survey divides respondents by sex, living quarters and class standing so they can be tabulated more easily.

About 30 percent of the questionnaires have been returned which Steller said is remarkable since they have been out about a week.

Although the returns are sketchy, Steller said, some trends are developing.

"Just looking offhand, we find most students think we're doing too much or about right in the area of what we offer and how diverse they are," he said. "The majority feel that the rec facilities are pretty important to very important here at UNL.

"Most people also feel that we don't have enough indoor facilities."

Steller said the department is hoping to verify the results of the ASUN Fund B vote from the elections two weeks ago with this survey. But he said the main purpose is to get some idea of students' satisfaction with the department.

He said the results could be helpful in developing the proposed recreational center.
