

City Council ...

Kurtenbach said LES "could be in a bad way" if the lid amendment passes. But he added, low-income people will suffer from a rate increase.

Miller said the LES budget should be closely monitored by the City Council instead of being looked at once a year.

Scarborough, Pals, Kurtenbach, Beech and Turner said the amendment should be on the ballot.

LES is a public service, Turner said, so the public should get the opportunity to vote on the rate increase.

Improvements in low-income housing and revitalization of the downtown area were discussed by nine of the candidates at a forum sponsored by the League of Women Voters Wednesday night at the Glass Onion. Hampton and Turner were absent.

"Young people are desperate for housing," Oldfield said.

Need for housing

Oldfield said she is working on proposals to be brought before the Homebuilders Association to promote improved housing, and also has worked with Lincoln bankers and real estate agents.

Oldfield emphasized the need for improved housing for young families and the elderly.

Danley said that although he is not "pro-business," the council needs to understand what kind of business and industry would benefit Lincoln.

"I don't want big, smoking plants," he said, "just good, clean industry."

Danley said that in the last three years only one small industry has been brought to Lincoln.

"We have nothing to replace Brandeis, and unemployment is up by 60 percent," he said.

Danley said he is in the process of speaking to developers and builders about possible downtown housing.

If elected, he said he would do "nothing drastic" to change zoning laws or housing regulations, but would work with the state Legislature, builders and developers to build additional downtown housing.

Possible tax abatement

"We could ask the Legislature about a tax abatement program," he said.

Miller, although in favor of increased downtown housing, said he is not in favor of tax abatements for such housing.

"Interest rates hold up building," he said.

Pals said that the trend in Lincoln has been to tear down buildings rather than renovate, and this trend should be reversed.

"People are living farther out. We need to bring them back downtown," he said.

Kurtenbach said that controls on rental rates would assist moderate and low-income students. Discounts for students who ride buses rather than drive their own cars would save students money and alleviate UNL's parking problems, he said.

Scarborough said that Lincoln would be a "wasteland" if it were not for UNL.

"Without the university, Lincoln would be sadly lacking in the arts," he said. The downtown area would not be as prosperous as it is without the college trade, he said.

Scarborough said that development of the downtown area, particularly added housing, would benefit UNL students.

Soaking up the sun

It's sitting around the fountain weather. And there always seems to be time for this spring activity.

This, then, is the identity of Jesus Christ. He is the man from Nazareth who redeemed men by his helplessness, in perfect obedience enacting their good in their behalf. As that same one, he was raised from the dead and manifested to be the redeemer, he cannot not live, and to conceive of him as not living is to misunderstand who he is.

—Hans W. Frei

Born in Breslau, Germany, Professor Frei took his early schooling in Berlin and at the Friends School Saffron Walden in Essex, England. He received the B.S. from North Carolina State, the B.D. from Yale Divinity School, and the Ph.D. from the Yale Graduate School. From 1945 to 1947, he served as minister of the First Baptist Church, North Stratford, New Hampshire. Before joining the faculty of Religious Studies at Yale 1957, Professor Frei held teaching positions at Wabash College and at the Episcopal Theological Seminary of the Southwest. He has been a Fulbright Fellow, a Fellow of the American Association of Theological Schools, and a Guggenheim Fellow. Among his major publications are The Identity of Jesus Christ and The Eclipse of Biblical Narrative.

Sponsored by the Religious Studies Committee of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln College of Arts and Sciences, the Atkinson Theological Lectures have been made possible through a gift to the University of Nebraska Foundation. These lectures will be open to students, faculty, and the general public.
