

UNL Health Center selects new doctor as medical director

Dr. Gerald Fleischli, 41, a graduate of Stanford Medical School and for 11 years a member of the NU Medical Center is the UNL Health Center's new medical director.

Fleischli, who replaces Dr. Garland Bare, was appointed by Steve Blom, the health center administrator.

At UNMC, Fleischli was director of the student and employee health program. He will begin his duties at UNL Sept. 8, Blom said.

Fleischli's predecessor was appointed medical director by Richard Armstrong, vice chancellor for student affairs, in November 1978. Bare will continue to be a part-time physician at the health center, and will also work part-time at the Gateway Professional Bldg. in a family practice group.

Blom said Bare made the decision to step down as medical director to become involved in the medical field full time.

Bare established the central appointment system and the acute illness services while he was medical director.

The central appointment system enables students to schedule appointments at their convenience. Previously, they had to wait in line to be helped.

The acute illness service enables students to see doctors in cases of emergency without an appointment.

Bare was medical director when the health center received a certificate of accreditation from the Accreditation Association for Ambulatory Health Care, Inc., in November of 1978. The certificate honored the health center for meeting all health care standards.

Administrator Blom said UNL is one of only 10 schools in the country to receive the designation.

Information on religions available now

Students looking for information on UNL campus ministry groups and religious organizations may inquire at several student assistance agencies.

Campus Activities and Programs keeps a list and additional information on recognized student religious organizations.

Ennio Quevedo, activities coordinator for CAP, said all recognized groups register their semester meetings and times through the Nebraska Union CAP office, on the second floor of the union.

Information on off-campus ministry groups is available through United Ministries in Higher Education at 333 N. 14th St.

A United Ministries representative said a campus ministry information flyer is available at both unions and at local off-campus churches.
