Nebraska Union to get insulation, windows for heat conservation

The Nebraska Union is scheduled to undergo several modifications within the next year intended to improve the building's efficiency.

The NU Board of Regents approved a $160,000 matching fund at their July 25th meeting that will be used to insulate the roof of the original building, modify the kitchen hoods, and replace windows in both building sections with double-glazed units.

"Our building was audited last spring, and it confirmed the need for energy conservation here," said Union director Daryl Swanson.

"When the energy crisis came along, we went around and removed the most wasteful things like everyone else. Now we're going to take care of the smaller things, and start paying more attention to how much energy we're using," he added.

The recommendations made by the Professional Engineering Co. of Omaha included changing the air ventilation from the existing double-duct, constant-volume system to a single-duct, variable-volume system. That would have run up the cost of renovations to $604,900. Without it the cost is slightly under $300,000.

"The air ventilation system needs some work, and we'd like to eventually get around to it, but we would be very hard-pressed to come up with a half million dollars," Swanson said.

"We would rather go ahead with the other four recommendations right now. The university and myself have been interested in changing these windows in the front for aesthetic reasons for quite some time now."

The University allocations and pending federal funds of between $130,000 and $140,000 could cover the costs of the project, although if the federal grant is too small one of the four projects could be in jeopardy, Swanson said.

"This is a classic example of spending money to makemoney," Swanson said. "We expect the payback on these modifications to start in seven years."

This semester marks the first full school term where the union is responsible for its own utilities. Although this does not automatically mean prices will go up, energy saving measures are needed because of it, Swanson said.

Get a $20 rebate on the TI-59 Programmable.

Even without the $20 rebate, the TI-59 is special—it's our most powerful programmable, and we've never offered it at a lower price.

The TI-59 gives you up to 960 program steps, or up to 100 memories, plus magnetic card read/write capability. You can also slip in one of TI's Solid State Software™ modules and successfully attack complex engineering, business, statistical and scientific problems. And by adding the optional PC-100C printer, you can record your calculations.

So if you like the idea of having real programmable power, take us up on our rebate offer. Buy a TI-59 now, and fill out the coupon below. The offer ends Dec. 31, 1981.

Local Sierra Club collects signatures for national petition

The Sierra Club is sponsoring a national petition drive protesting the policies of James Watt, U.S. secretary of the interior.

Natalie McClendon, chairperson of the local Bluestem Sierra Club, said the club plans to send Congress a petition containing one million signatures. The petition calls for Watt's resignation.

"The petition is to protest the policies of James Watt, which are essentially those of the Reagan administration," McClendon said.

The number of signatures collected in the Lincoln area is unknown, but about 750,000 have been collected nationwide, she said. Friends of the Earth and The National Wildlife Federation are other groups supporting the Sierra Club's effort.

"This petition is intended to demonstrate to the President and Congress our sentiment toward the policies of Watt and the administration," McClendon said. She said one of Watt's most damaging proposals is discontinuing the acquisition of land for national parks. She said this will allow over-commercialization of existing parks and prevent the establishing of new parks.

Economic experts to talk of security

Individual security and whether it should be a responsibility of government or the individual will be examined in a seven-part public lectures series offered by the UNL College of Business Administration.

The 1981-82 Dr. Scholl Foundation Forum on the Future of Private Enterprise entitled "Security in the 80s: Private Initiative and Public Policy" will feature business, academic and government leaders at lectures in Lincoln and Omaha.

Among the speakers will be Jerry L. Jordan of the President's Council of Economic Advisors, who will speak at 10 a.m. April 9 on "An Agenda for Restoring the Market System."

Admission to the five Lincoln lectures and two Omaha lectures is by free tickets, which can be obtained by contacting the Center for the Study of the American Business System at UNL.

Other Lincoln lectures and lecturers are:

Sept. 24 - "The Decline and Fall of the Welfare Industry," Charles D. Hobbs, president of Charles D. Hobbs Inc.

Oct. 33 - "The State and 'The Safety Net: From Henry VIII to the Social Security Act,'" Jonathan R.T. Hughes, professor of economics at Northwestern University.

Jan. 21 - "Employment Security: Government, Union and Market Protection," James T. Bennett, professor of economics at George Mason University.

March 18 - "The Constitutional Setting for a Free Enterprise Economy," James M. Buchanan, director of the Center for the Study of Public Choice at Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

Omaha lectures are:

Nov. 18 - "Public Lands Policy: What Legacy for the Future?," John Baden, director of the Center for Political Economy at Montana State University.

Feb. 18 - "Retirement Security: Perspectives for Reform," Colin Campbell, Loren M. Berry professor of economics at Dartmouth College.
