The Cornhusker Marching Band practices every morning in the stadium. Their first performance will be at the Nebraska-Florida State game, Sept. 19.

Cornhusker Marching Band prepares new season lineup

By Kirsten Nielsen

The Cornhusker Marching Band is tuning up for another season of music and marching.

Although this year's football schedule presents special challenges (four home games in a row), Robert Fought, the band's director, feels confident.

"Things may not always be as absolutely precise as we would like, but I think audiences can still expect quality performances."

Band practice, which began Aug. 13, has been intense, not to say grueling, he said.

The final roster for this year's group has about 260 members, including 24 flag and dance corps members.

"We don't go in for the Cecil DeMille tactics at the half-time shows," Fought said. "I guess you'd have to say our main attraction is our great variety of music."

The band's first performance, at the Florida State game Sept. 19, will feature themes from James Bond movies.

At other games, the band will present music from "Fame," "Porgy and Bess" and a selection of Sousa marches. John Lennon songs will be the theme of the homecoming game.

Music is especially arranged for the band several months in advance, while Fought designs the marching formations himself. It takes about two weeks of practice for the group to learn a show, he said.

"It's a lot of work for a short pre-game and a 12-minute half-time performance," Fought said. "Sometimes you'd like to have the chance to do it again. But you really just about have to have a different show for every game."

Fought said the band rarely performs at places other than the football games. He said there usually is an end-of-season concert featuring highlights of past performances.
