

University rolls out red carpet

Friday will be Red Carpet Day for about 200 high school students from Nebraska.

Red Carpet Day is sponsored by the Student Alumni Association and the Office of Admissions, according to Jean Nelson, a junior studying human development and two year member of the association.

The students attending Red Carpet Day are National Merit Scholarship winners, and other outstanding seniors who have been recommended by their high school principals.

The seniors come to UNL for a day to personally visit deans of colleges that interest them. The association also provides time for high school students to ask questions they have about the university.

In addition, the association provides tours of city and east campuses, and the seniors eat lunch at Selleck Quadrangle. The Scarlet and Cream singers will perform for the students.

"We would like to emphasize UNL to the students as leaders, and bring them down here," Nelson said.

Alums...

Victor L. Lechtenberg, a professor of agronomy at Purdue University, said technology is becoming more prevalent among small farmers.

"In the next few years you'll see more and more technology at the production level," he said.

Lechtenberg said a December conference at Purdue on the small farmers' use of computers may draw 1,500 people.

Federal cutbacks may affect the level of research at universities, Lechtenberg said. This would force universities to rely more on private companies for financing, he said.

Gregory said he thought President Ronald Reagan's economic policies will lower interest rates but, "as high as they are (now) that's not really too surprising."

He said he thought Reagan's economic policies can work if they are given time, but, he added "America is an impatient country. We're trying to correct errors that were made years ago."

Fraternity having 'dry' week

Alpha Tau Omega Fraternity, 1433 R. is holding its third annual "Week on the Wagon" until Sunday. Organizer Tom Hupp, a senior accounting major, said that during the course of the week, ATO members will abstain from drinking alcohol.

"We want to help demonstrate to students that there are alternatives to drinking, and you don't have to go to the bars to have fun," Hupp said.

Hupp said the idea was started three years ago after the bonfires and destruction that preceded Nebraska's 17-14 victory over Oklahoma.

"The campus was getting a bad name by the community. They probably thought that all we did was drink and run wild like that," Hupp said. "We wanted to show the public that we were more than that."

Since that time, the idea has caught on, and Hupp said each of ATO's 69 members make the week a personal thing.

"It's a time to reevaluate your own drinking habits," Hupp said.

"And not just for us, but for the people that see or hear about us doing it. They will start to wonder if they could stop drinking for a week," he added.

Two sororities, Kappa Alpha Theta and Delta Delta Delta are joining the ATO's this year. With the sorority commitment, and ATO's non-resident members, Hupp estimates that about 250 to 300 persons will be participating.

Saturday, a "Dry Dance," open to the public, will be held at the Nebraska Union, Hupp said. The Star City Players will entertain at the 8 p.m. dance, and admission will be $2 with proceeds going to a campus Alcohol Awareness fund, set up by the ATO's. The fund is available for groups to use for alcohol awareness projects, Hupp said.

"I would like to see this go campus wide among all Greeks soon," Hupp said. "I think it would leave people with a good impression about the UNL Greek system."

Schedules due Friday

The deadline for pre-registering for 1982 spring semester classes at UNL is Friday at 5 p.m.

Tony Schkade, assistant director of registration and records, said pre-registration will be more important because of the administration's new policy that makes low-enrollment classes subject to cancellation before general registration begins.
