

'Man with no respect' in Omaha

Rodney Dangerfield, the man who gets no respect and a star in the motion picture Caddyshack, will perform two shows at the Orpheum Theater in Omaha Dec. 4 at 7 p.m. and 10 p.m.

Dangerfield is one of the hottest comedians in the country at the present time, but for him success did not come until the second time around. From age 19 to 28 he was a reasonably successful night club comic, but gave up his career to become a businessman for the next dozen years. At age 40, he went back to comedy and worked his way up through the clubs and late night talk show circuit, to become popular enough with college audiences to have been selected Harvard University's Class Day Commencement speaker in 1978.

Tickets for the show are all reserved seats and priced at $15.00 and $12.50. Tickets are available at Brandeis ticket outlets and the Civic Auditorium.

Quality sound doesn't have to be expensive as shown by this Sony-Kenwood system. The receiver provides ample power and the convenience of push-button presets on radio while the smooth, reliable operation of the semi-automatic direct drive turntable confirm that these are Sony's. The loudspeakers are by Kenwood and these 8"-two-way speakers prove that good things do come in small packages. A Shure Cartridge completes the system for great sound, compact size and affordable price.
