

Senate candidate says state needs Republican

By Pat Higgins

The 1982 election will determine what direction the country will take in the future, said Jim Keck, a Republican running for U.S. Senate. Keck, brought in to speak at the Union by the College Republicans, said Nebraska needs a Republican senator to work with Ronald Reagan.

"Now is a time that is a window of opportunity to make changes in the government. In the fall of 1980, the people gave a mandate to change from the ever growing federal government," Keck said.

Keck said the three major issues in the upcoming campaign are economy (particularly high interest rates), agriculture concerns and control of water resources. High interest rates are caused by deficit spending, Keck said, adding that he thought the fiscal 1983 budget has too large of a deficit. Keck said the current recession is not a Ronald Reagan recession.

"Reaganomics haven't really taken effect yet," Keck said.

Keck, a former Air Force general, said the defense budget should be scrutinized as closely as the rest of the budget.

Incumbent Sen. Ed Zorinsky has a high, but shallow level of approval in Nebraska and can be defeated, Keck said.

"Ed Zorinsky was dead wrong on Nicaragua. The problem in El Salvador stems from the Sandanista government in Nicaragua," Keck said.

Keck said Ronald Reagan will come to Nebraska to campaign for him. He added that the Republican party must hold onto a majority status in the Senate.

"If Ted Kennedy is the majority leader, Ronald Reagan couldn't govern the country the way he wants to," Keck said.

Bereuter announces re-election campaign

Rep. Douglas Bereuter announced his candidacy for re-election to a third term Tuesday morning in Lincoln.

Bereuter said his experience is an important factor in making the decisions that lie ahead.

"We are making critical changes in the direction and scope of our government right now," Bereuter said in a press release. "I believe that my experience as a member of Congress and my experience in Nebraska are especially valuable as we make those changes. In tough times, in a volatile political environment, in a changing Congress, experience is an especially important asset."

Bereuter, a Republican, made his announcement at a press conference in Lincoln and then made similar announcements in Beatrice, Fremont, Nebraska City, Norfolk, Seward, South Sioux City and York.

Lawrence Sather, a Democrat from Fremont, is the only other announced candidate for Bereuter's seat.
