

Union open later finals week

The East Union will be open regular hours during dead week, said Ray Koziol, East Union operations manager. During finals week, though, the union will be open Monday through Thursday until midnight, rather than 10:30 p.m. as usual. Friday and Saturday of finals week the union will be open until 11 p.m. Sunday, May 9, the union will be closed.

Summer hours for the union will be 7:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. The union will be closed Saturdays and Sundays after May 8.

Three UNL students receive opportunity to study in Japan

Travel grants for three UNL students have been awarded by Kawasaki Motors Corp. to enable the students to study at Nanzan University in Ngoya, Japan.

The three students to receive the awards are Scott S. Ahlstrand, Lincoln, Veronica Ann Jurgena, Hastings, and Timothy E. Millea, Omaha.

UNL is involved in an exchange program with Nanzan University in which 3 to 5 students have studied in Japan each year since 1975. The exchange program is not limited to the students who received the Kawasaki grants. Other students may study in Nagoya in 1982-83 also.

Speaker says water supply near depletion

Water resources in the 21st century will be as precious as oil in the 20th century, Prof. Paul Gessaman of the Department of Agricultural Economics at UNL said Thursday. Gessaman was speaking on water management to the final Great Plains Studies seminar at St. Mark's on the Campus.

Our society in the United States should decide how much of a water reserve should be maintained for the future because there are errors being made today, Gessaman said.

"Some people's attitude is, 'what have my grandchildren done for me lately.'" If we continue to withdraw ground water at the present rate there won't be adequate supplies available in the future," Gessaman said.

The future debate will be between farmers wishing to use water for irrigation and city dwellers who use water for recreation, Gessaman said. It is a question of rights to a livelihood for the farmer, Gessaman said. The difficulty with sharing the shortages equally is that endless litigation will be the result, he said.

"I applaud the Legislature for attempting to plan ahead on this problem this year," Gessaman said. "When the water situation gets tight, tough questions will have to be wrestled with in the Legislature."

The old concept of "use it or lose it" in regard to water is no longer valid, Gessaman said. He said that concept works against efficient use of water. The assumption always has been that replacement sources can be found in the future, Gessaman said.

"If we continue to withdraw ground water supplies at the current rate, they will be depleted not very far in the future," Gessaman said.

It will not be economically feasible to irrigate in the future in the manner that it is done today Gessaman said. Nebraska is in better shape for water resources than the rest of the Great Plains states because of the Ogallala aquifer, he said. Government will have to change the rules of the game as water becomes increasingly scarce, Gessaman said.
