GLC plans voter registration drive

By Eric Peterson

A voter registration program will be one of the main activities of ASUN's Government Liaison Committee this fall, said Nette Nelson, GLC chair. The GLC works with the Legislature on student issues such as the university budget.

Nelson said the GLC state liaison, Andy Carothers, has scheduled Sept. 13, 14, and 15 as voter registration days when the League of Women Voters will be available on campus to register students.

Nelson said she hopes to get the College Republicans and Young Democrats involved with the effort. She said a lot of students think they can't register to vote unless they go back to their home county, but this is not the case.

"One of the confusions is that students don't know that you can register wherever you consider your home to be," she said. Nelson noted that postage-paid absentee ballots will be available.

Heather Housand, GLC legislative liaison, will be bringing legislative candidates to campus and will organize informational breakfasts with individual senators.

Housand is in charge of GLC's Adopt-a-Senator program. Through the program a student chooses a senator, usually from the student's hometown legislative district, to share information on student concerns with.

Nelson said one of GLC's major functions in the past, research into the university budget, now will be the primary responsibility of the Budget and Fees Committee of the ASUN Senate. She said the change will help get more ASUN senators involved in the budget process and make the GLC work more closely with the senate itself.

Meri Blaylock, GLC media and informational liaison, will be working to get more information on student issues to the outstate newspapers.

"We'll be asking them to contact us and get some idea of student opinion," she said.

Nelson pointed out that information packets that GLC workers took home to their hometown newspapers during the semester and spring breaks has surprisingly good results, with some students getting front page coverage.

The GLC will continue to work on the federal financial aid cuts issue, which Nelson said is still very much alive.

"There's a little bit of trepidation, but a lot of relief, because the cuts weren't as big as was feared," Nelson said. "But the potential is still there; the president's budget still requires larger cuts. We'll be continuing to monitor that."

Laura Hein, who as GLC federal liaison is in charge of the financial aid cut issue, will be bringing congressional candidates to campus, Nelson added.
