

Mac fans wait to buy tickets

Students camp out on the south steps of the Nebraska Union Saturday night in hopes of purchasing tickets to the Fleetwood Mac concert, scheduled for Oct. 9 at the Devaney Sports Center. Tickets went on sale at noon Sunday at the union and Brandeis ticket outlets. Sales were going briskly when the booths closed at 4 p.m. Sunday, but promoters said they didn't know how many tickets had been sold and good seats should be available as late as Tuesday.

'Strawberry Square' forever

By Chuck Jagoda

"Strawberry Square," a musical education series produced by the Nebraska ETV Network with funding from the Nebraska Department of Education, will be nationally aired beginning this month.

Tom Walsh of the Office of Instructional Television, which is responsible for all elementary and secondary instructional material broadcast on NETV, said the series will be broadcast in Tennessee, New York, South Dakota, California, West Virginia and Wisconsin.

The series uses music and movement to teach language arts and social skills to children in kindergarten through third grade.

"We developed the idea for the show in answer to needs in music instruction," he said. "All that was available was the stand-in-front-of-the-camera-and-explain (type of show). We felt music should be an integrated part of the curriculum, that it should be (treated) as part of everything else in life."

Like all Nebraska educational programming, the series will be broadcast on the network schedule so individual schools can tape the shows at the time of broadcast and them at their convenience.

Walsh said he considers "Strawberry Square" unique because it uses music to aid in the teaching of many primary goals of schools, such as developing a strong self-image, adjusting to a school setting from a family setting and developing good communication skills.

Mike Feduk, the NETV executive producer of the "Strawberry Square" series, is now working with the second set of 33 episodes. Feduk said he expects that the expansion of the show to a national level will allow for an increase in the quality of the show and more location shooting.

The Office of Instructional Television has also developed "Think About," an integrated approach to the teaching of science skills, and "Land Treasure," a series to teach pre-reading skills to kindergarten children. "Success in the Job Market" teaches senior high school students how to write a resume and how to get along in interpersonal relationships. "Neighborhoods," teaches second graders citizenship skills and geographic principles. It studies neighborhood relationships in small towns, rural areas, cities and suburban areas.
