Which group next?

I hope you are somehow able to explain to me the other point of view in the NU Medical Center ticket problem. I hope someone is able to tell me why the intrinsic value of a medical student at the game is somehow less than that of any other fan. Or at least why a medical student in Omaha is any less worthy of being a member of our student body.

I hope that you are also able to explain why the economic reasons for denying medical center students tickets with a 76,000 seat stadium is greater than the social reasons. I have never heard much support for our team from our largest Nebraska corporations unless the support was in the form of green paper. On the other hand, no one has attended Nebraska football games more loyally than the student body, much like any other school.

I would like to know if our athletic department is really in such a money pinch that it cannot see the importance of full student body support. Or how important these two or three hour games are as a social event for the average student whose life consists of long hours of study and work in these depressed economic times.

If I were able, I would like to ask Regent Ed Schwartzkopf of Lincoln just who he thinks supported him during the '40s when football wasn't quite so popular and then hope he poses that question to the rest of the members of the NU Board of Regents who are still able to do something about this.

And most of all I would like to know what group is going to be next? Because if this is allowed I'll guarantee you that the medical students won't be the end of it. I sincerely hope that our administrators are able to put their hearts where their wallets have been up to now.

"Sure," she said. "I was walking down the street with a girl friend and he gave me kind of a whistle and a wink and made this comment. Nothing lewd. And then we started talking. He asked me out and here I am. Married to him."

I take it you would not call yourself a feminist, I said.

"I don't believe in women's lib at all," she said. "Not at all. I don't believe that I should go build a house or be an executive. I mean, if I have the brains to be a doctor, that's OK. But I don't want to run a corporation. I don't want to have a woman for president. Ugh. If God had wanted women to be like men, he would have created Adam and Fred."

I thanked her for being so frank and we concluded our conversation. About a half-hour later, she called back.

"I had to call and tell you," she said. "I just went out to lunch and came back. And I passed this place where there are about a zillion workmen. And I got a lot of reaction."

What kind of reaction?
"Whistles," she said. "And one: 'Hey George, look at that!'"

And how did that make you feel?
"Good," she said. "Real good. And I hope the day never comes when men stop doing it."
