

Parents wait . . .

"I've tried to explain to them that Elza is 21; it's not against the law for her to leave home, and every lead we have indicates that she left because she wanted to. I'm afraid that the only way we may find her is if she eventually shows up deceased."

Lt. William Mahon, commander of the missing persons section of the Chicago Police Department, agreed with Bernet. "We do not believe that foul play was involved when she left home," he said. "We get 21,000 calls a year for missing persons. We clear most of them. But once in awhile you have a person who takes off and is never heard from again. I'm afraid that's what has happened here."

Slowly, William and Else Habinyak are coming to realize that their daughter may never come home again. With great pain, they are even coming to realize that perhaps she left because she wanted to.

That doesn't help. The facts, in their minds, remain the same. The daughter they had brought up from infancy went to school one day with only the clothes on her back, and she never came home.

"We cry every night," Habinyak said. "We have dinner, and we wait by the phone, and finally we pray together. Then my wife begins to cry, and I put my arm on her to comfort her, and I cry, too."

Elza's mother doesn't want to believe the worst. At this point, though, she would be happy just to know that her daughter is alive. That would allow her to have some inner peace.

"If someone who knew something would just let us know that she is all right," Mrs. Habinyak said. "That would be enough for me. Just to know that she is OK and taking care of herself, or that someone is taking care of her. When you've taken care of your daughter all her life, you want to know if she is all right."

Other nations . . .

There are special events like the upcoming China Week; there's Nebraska Model United Nations (which requires participants to know and understand the policies of the country they represent); and there's always the foreign students who attend UNL, who know about their own countries and who can give you a different perspective on events.

As Ronald Cere, assistant professor of modern languages and literatures, said in a press release on a recent business language awards ceremony, "one out of every eight jobs in American industry and one out of five in American agriculture already depend on international trade, and Nebraska is one of the states heavily involved in both areas."

The statement addressed the reason for taking a business language course, but the idea is the same: Americans have more to gain from learning about what goes on in other countries than it may appear. Just ask Ann.

WE'RE HAVING A PARTY! DON'T B.Y.O.B.

Come to the free Grand-Dad 114 party this Friday, November 19. With music by Footloose!

* We have a new Grand-Dad 114 we'd like you to meet. Grand-Dad 114 Barrel Proof. So we're throwing a party this Friday at the Southwest Civic Center. There's no cover charge. And, of course, the drinks are on us.

* 114 Barrel Proof is the most expensive Bourbon in the world. It's the only Bourbon bottled straight from the barrel, unmixed and undiluted. But what makes it so special is its remarkable smoothness. See for yourself.

* Footloose will be providing the music. And you could win a free T-shirt or poster or another prize!

* Things are starting up at 8:30 P.M., and they'll keep going until—when else?—1:14 A.M. To get to the Civic Center, take 9th Street south to South Street. Go right on South Street. Then follow South Street for about 1/4 mile to Van Dorn. Follow Van Dorn 1 1/4 miles; the Civic Center will be on your left.

* See you Friday. And remember, don't B.Y.O.B.
