Sen. Lee Rupp of Monroe worked 13 years as a fishery supervisor with the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission. Rupp said he had done some "low-key" lobbying in relation to his job.

"One thing that has been kind of hard to adjust to is that there are so many things going on here at the same time," Rupp said. "I'm sure that will get worse before it gets better."

Rupp is a former UNL student who "spent a lot of idle hours sitting in the gallery," so the legislative process wasn't totally new to him, he said.

Freshman Sen. Chris Abboud of Ralston was a UNL law student for three years.

Abboud said his experience as a UNL student was one of the major reasons he decided to run for senator.

"The (university) budget increases year after year, but the students get the short end of the deal," Abboud said. "Decisions aren't made by the students, they're made by the administrators, and I think that's wrong."

Abboud cited the ongoing computer sit-in at the university as a case in point. Faculty and students in the computer science department at UNL have staged a sit-in at Chancellor Martin Massengale's office to protest the lack of adequate computer facilities and computer time.

"Obviously, there's a lot of interest in computers. Money just isn't getting spent in the right area," Abboud said.

He said his biggest problem as a freshman senator was a lack of time.

"We go all day and then come back at night and work on bills," Abboud said.

Corrections

A story in the Jan. 14 issue of the Daily Nebraskan should have read that a proposed $35 increase in the 1983-84 room and board rate by university housing would make the total cost for a double room $1,860. According to the Office of University Housing's Good Life handbook, current room and board costs $1,825.

The headline on page six of the Jan. 14 Daily Nebraskan should have read "Friends of state Museum incorporate."

The Daily Nebraskan regrets the errors.
