Students and faculty are welcome to attend the Christian Science Organization meeting Friday at 5:15 p.m. in the Nebraska Union. The room will be posted on the daily events calendar in the north lobby.

The NU Foundation has announced the establishment of the first endowed professorship exclusively for the UNL School of Music. The chair will be funded by a $100,000 gift from Richard H. Larson of Lincoln.

The professorship will include an annual stipend of $5,000 to the basic state-supported salary of the recipient.

Raymond Haggh, chairman of the School of Music, said the search for the initial recipient will begin soon. Candidates will be evaluated on the basis of national prominence and their accomplishments in their particular area of music.

UNL will be the host of this year's Midwest Rowing Clinic Feb. 12 and 13. The clinic, expected to draw 120 athletes and coaches from throughout the Midwest, will be in the UNL boathouse on 16th Street and in Nebraska Hall. A highlight of the clinic will be a banquet Saturday at 7:30 p.m. at the Nebraska Center for Continuing Education, 33rd and Holdrege streets. For tickets and other information, call 472-1220.

The Percussion Company
—music that's made for marimbas, xylophones

"We originally got together to play Christmas carols at local malls and shopping centers, but people seemed to enjoy our music so we stuck together," said Larry Lawless of the Percussion Company — a five man band that includes four UNL students.

Although they still play Christmas carols, they've turned more toward ragtime, Latin American and jazz music, he said.

The group performs its own arrangements, Lawless said, because there's not a lot of music arranged for marimbas and xylophones.

Members of the year-old group are John Scofield, a Lincoln Public Schools instrumental music teacher; Bob Maag, UNL music major; Tod Barnard and Larry Lawless, both UNL music majors and percussion section leaders of the UNL Marching Band; and Larry MacTaggart, a graduate student and member of the UNL Marching Band.

The group has played at Chesterfield, Bottomsley and Potts, Chelsea's Pub and the Zoo Bar. They play at various elementary schools and once played on All Night Live — a national cable television program.

They will perform at Kimball Hall on Feb. 11 and 12 in the Nebraska Dance Ensemble and on Feb. 23 in their own recital.

"We have various jobs and concerts through April," Lawless said, "but after that, our future is uncertain."
