Blitz, Chandler and Luedtke enter 1983 mayoral elections

By Thom Gabrukiewicz

When Lincoln residents head for the polls in May to choose their new mayor, three more names will greet them on the ballot. Henry Blitz, Barton Chandler and Roland Luedtke have entered the 1983 mayoral race.

Blitz announced his intentions to become Lincoln's mayor Jan. 31.

The 68-year-old retired Burlington-Northern employee said he sees his chances as good, despite the more recognizable names of former Lt. Gov. Luedtke and City Council Chairman Joe Hampton.

"I don't think it makes a difference," Blitz said. "Every man states his platform."

Blitz, a registered Democrat, said he thinks Lincoln's worst problem is unemployment.

"Don't lay people off," he said. "Keep them on the job a while and see if things pick up."

"I feel there will be an upturn very shortly," Blitz said. "If we keep people working then their buying power will be up. We can't lay people off and expect to raise taxes also."

Luedtke announced his entry into the race Friday at his law office just west of the state Capitol.

"I am here today to announce my candidacy for mayor of the city of Lincoln. I am doing this, only after first satisfying in my own mind that I am willing and able to commit myself to excellence in the complex, complicated and frequently controversial job of running the city of Lincoln," Luedtke said.

The 59-year-old Republican said in the upcoming weeks he will present his positions and proposals on various local issues.

 "Let me say that I am well aware of the challenges before me in seeking to carry on the tradition of leadership that present and past administrations have provided for this city for many years," he said.

Luedtke said he had talked with Mayor Helen Boosalis, but that the mayor was doing the proper thing by not endorsing anyone.

"She certainly did not discourage me," he said.

Shortly after Luedtke's announcement, Barton "Bart" Chandler announced his candidate in the mayoral race while standing in front of the statue of Abraham Lincoln on the west side of the state Capitol.

Chandler, who was a mayoral candidate in 1979 and ran in the Republican primary for governor in 1982, said his chances are even at this point in the race.

"Mr. Luedtke is well qualified and has very fine ideals," he said.

Chandler ran in the 1982 primary for governor as a Republican candidate. Before that he was registered as an Independent, but he is now a Democrat.

Until November 1982, Chandler, 45, was employed at the Ace Hardware Corp.

"I am now enjoying being on the recall list as many other citizens of the Lincoln area are in the same boat."

Chandler said he believes Lincoln should follow other cities and attract new industry to curb unemployment.

"Lincoln residents must respond with the same enthusiasm that we might find if we were at a football game between Nebraska and Oklahoma," Chandler said. "We must illustrate to industry why this should be the right location for their business."
