

Grad-Park...

Entrance and exit ramps for Grad-Park could be located near the cafeteria back door. Students could get lunch as they drive through. The system could be called "Park It Your Way." With increased appeal, the university may ultimately need to add some floors above the Grad-Park — maybe a spa room to work off extra pounds accumulated from not walking to class.

As a safeguard against vandals or non-paying trespassers, student identification cards would be implemented as passes. Vali-Dine cards could be used so that students could Grad-Park and get a "Park It Your Way" burger at the same time. In the beginning of each semester students would have the option to buy a Grad-Park plan, much like a meal plan.

Since there would be fewer parking spaces than students, the system could be run like a football lottery. Mailed with the "pickle" lottery card (Grad-Park card) a printed notice would be inserted in the envelope saying, "This parking ticket is strictly a chance. No spaces are guaranteed and no refunds." Fees from cards would go toward the construction of a glassed-in lounge atop the garage.

For a finale, we would need a theme song. When students drive up to stick their pickle cards into the computer, a recording (to the tune of the Burger King "Have It Your Way" theme) would play: "Hold the pickle, hold it, let us. Park your car, the cop won't get us. Only thing you have to do is Park It Your Way."
