Flying . . .

Continued from Page 12

Engineers often need to fly to remote construction sites.

An added benefit of having a license can be the service you can perform for friends and relatives. Schlegelmilch, who has a commercial pilot's license, said he often has people ask him to fly them places, with a good rate of pay. With a private pilot's license you can be tipped and have your expenses paid, but a formal salary would be illegal.

Some people, like Schlegelmilch, just like to fly. He said that his desire to fly was the main thing that led him to flight school.

If you have the desire to fly, or if you are bored stiff, $20 can introduce you to the world of flight, and Schlegelmilch says the best time to fly is sundown.

"It's beautiful," he said.
