Penn State defense scheme acknowledges UNL speed

By Jeff Browne

The UNL athletic department calls the Huskers' starting backfield "The Scoring Explosion," but Penn State head coach Joe Paterno and his defensive coordinator, Jerry Sandusky, think they have the players to defuse any bombs the Huskers may want to detonate in tonight's Kickoff Classic at Giants Stadium.

The Penn State coaches will rely on their defense to keep their young offense in the game, but they are still wary of the type of havoc Nebraska's offense can wreak.

"(Mike) Rozier is the best tailback I've ever seen at Nebraska," Paterno said.

Last year, Rozier was only able to gain 86 yards against the Lions, but Sandusky said his defense did not key on Rozier, and he has no plans to do anything differently this year.

The Lion coaches feel that their defensive players are as good at their positions as Rozier is at his.

Penn State has All-American Scott Radecic returning at linebacker, defensive lineman Steve Sefer and Greg Gattuso to the crew that held Rozier more than 50 yards short of his season average at Beaver Stadium.

Nebraska wingback Irving Fryar, who caught seven passes for 112 yards against the Lions last year, is another player who worries Paterno, although the New Jersey native wasn't recruited heavily by Paterno three years ago.

"Fryar was one of those guys we misjudged," Paterno said, adding that he lost track of Rozier along the recruiting trail.

The final third of the Nebraska "explosion", quarterback Turner Gill, could be Paterno's biggest worry.

"Gill is an experienced quarterback who can do anything he wants to do," Paterno said, adding that the Lions can't concede anything to the Husker senior. But, that to stop him cold might be asking the impossible.

The task of corralling Fryar and frustrating Gill will rest on a secondary that has two returning starters, one an All-American.

Free safety Mark Robinson, a 1982

All-American on the strength of 70 tackles and four interceptions, expects to see a repeat of last year's performance against the Huskers and another national championship for the Lions.

"We are part of a tradition and we intend to maintain it," he said. "Last year, everyone was saying our defense wasn't a typical Penn State defense. When we finally came together, we proved we were continuing that tradition."
