

September a time to celebrate sight

Try to imagine spending a lifetime, or part of one, in a blurred or darkened world.

Think of the everyday activities that would be nearly impossible.

It would be difficult to cope with classroom situations where televisions, chalkboards and video tapes are involved.

The National Society to Prevent Blindness wants people to know that many of the leading causes of blindness have no noticeable symptoms, that there are causes of blindness other than birth defects, and that many causes can be treated successfully.

As the kickoff celebration of the 75th anniversary of NSPB, Gov. Bob Kerrey proclaimed September as Sight-Saving Month in Nebraska. A number of activities will recognize sight's importance and celebrate sight.

On Sept. 17, the society will participate in the Bergan-Mercy Health Fair. Each Wednesday there will be a Prevent Blindness Fair during the noon hour at the Lincoln Foundation Gardens, 14th and N streets. Free information and materials on eye safety and health are available at these events.
