Suits seek billions from Korean Air Lines

NEW YORK — Lawsuits seeking billions of dollars in damages have been filed by survivors of the Americans among the 269 people who died when South Korean flight 007 was shot down by Soviet interceptors on Sept. 1.

Such cases may clog federal courts for years, but lawyers involved appear to agree that the key issue will be whether Korean Air Lines was guilty of such gross misconduct that established international limits on money for survivors do not apply.

The Warsaw Convention, an international treaty adopted in 1933, sets a ceiling of $75,000 per passenger in assessing compensation for survivors of airline disasters. However, that limit is invalid if it can be proved that an airline is at fault when life is lost.

KAL's liability insurance of $400 million is more than enough to cover standard claims from the incident, the airline's attorney, George Tompkins, told Reuters.

Melvin Belli, a trial lawyer from San Francisco, said the $75,000 limit on damages should not apply to KAL because the airline "went over Soviet territory on other occasions and they knew how dangerous it was." But KAL's Tompkins said the airline would "vigorously defend" all suits seeking compensation in excess of $75,000.

Jets continue raids

BEIRUT — Lebanese fighter-bombers again attacked anti-government forces in the mountains near Beirut Sunday, knocking out artillery positions and a concentration of armed men, government announcements said.

They said the jets swooped on forces that have been trying to drive the army out of the strategic town of Souk El-Gharb, nine miles southeast of the capital.

In Damascus, a spokesman for the anti-government National Salvation Front, a coalition of pro-Syrian opposition politicians, said its forces had bombed a makeshift airfield of the Lebanese Air Force north of Beirut, making it unusable. State-run Beirut Radio said five people were killed.

Israeli Cabinet meets

JERUSALEM — President Chaim Herzog Sunday consulted leading contenders to form a new Israeli government following Prime Minister Menachem Begin's resignation, as the cabinet held a secret session to review the growing crisis in Lebanon.

The weekly Cabinet meeting was designated a session of the Ministerial Defense Committee, whose work is classified. An official statement said the ministers discussed Lebanon during the three-hour meeting and were briefed by the head of military intelligence, Gen. Ehud Barak.

Australia II wins

NEWPORT, R.I. — Australia II posted its first victory in the America's Cup series on Sunday. The Aussie yacht's triumph narrowed the margin held by the American's Liberty to 2-1 in the best-of-seven series on Rhode Island Sound, the margin of victory — three minutes and 14 seconds — surpassed the two minutes and nine seconds by which the British boat Endeavor had defeated Rainbow in 1984, the largest previous victory margin by a challenger.

Ties to military

NEW YORK — Rolando Galman, the alleged assassin of Filipino opposition leader Benigno Aquino, had ties to the Philippines air force that may imply a military role in the Aquino assassination, a report published Sunday in Newsweek International magazine said. The report said Galman, whose body was found next to Aquino's on the tarmac at Manila airport, had been employed until less than a week before the killing by an air force officer.

One official, described by the magazine as having intimate links to the Malacanang Palace, was quoted as saying: "There is no doubt that members of the military carried out the Aquino assassination."
