Trumble, Blum crowned Homecoming royalty

By Lisa Davis

Juniors Mary Trumble and Steve Blum were crowned 1983 Homecoming queen and king Saturday during halftime of the Nebraska-Colorado game.

Trumble, a dietetics major and member of Alpha Chi Omega sorority, described the experience as a "very memorable one."

"I was so excited, I could hardly believe it," Trumble said.

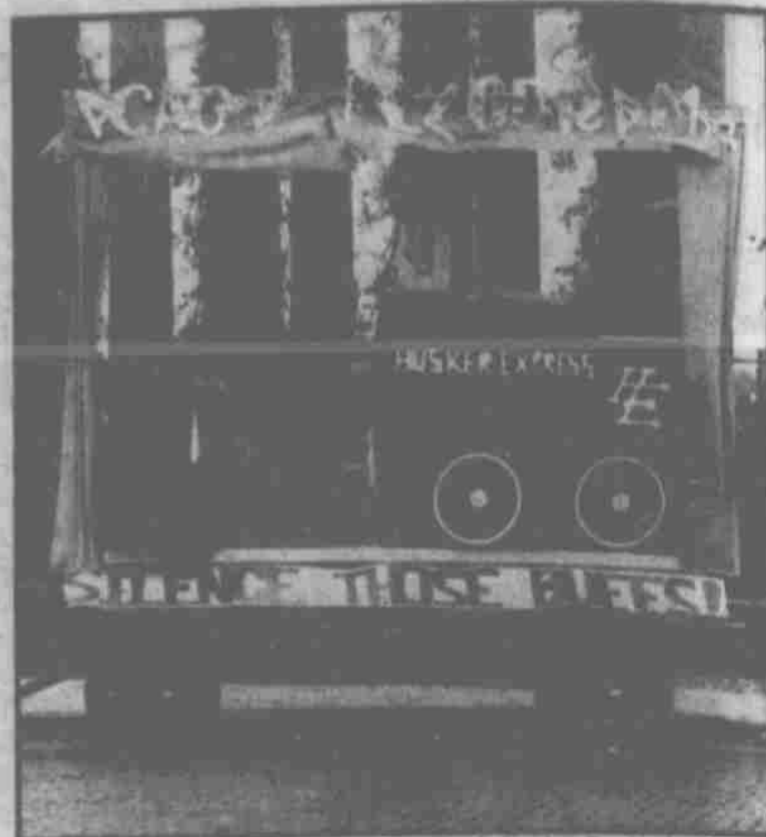

Blum is a finance major and a member of Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity.

First runners up were Julie Meusburger, an engineering major and Eric Edwards, a business administration major.

Second runners up were Becky Barlow, a business administration major and Paul Edens, an education major.

Winners of the float contest were announced Friday at the pep rally following the parade of displays. Acacia won first place in the single-entry category of the float competition. Alpha Chi Omega and Phi Gamma Delta were named as the first place recipients in the double-entry category.

Winners of the banner contest were also announced at the pep rally. Alpha Gamma Rho, Gamma Phi Beta, Chi Omega, Alpha Chi Omega and Harper-Schramm-Smith won the banner competition, with each banner including the Homecoming theme, "just for the fun of it."

The Acacia fraternity house float (above) and the entry from the Alpha Chi Omega sorority house and the Phi Gamma Delta fraternity house (below) were judged the first place winners in the homecoming 1983 float competition. These floats and almost 30 other displays constructed by various UNL student organizations highlighted the Homecoming parade, which wound its way through downtown Lincoln despite drizzly skies and cool temperatures Friday evening. The floats were displayed in Memorial Plaza Friday and Saturday. This was the first time in several years that floats were part of the Homecoming parade. It was the first time in 20 years that the parade's route went through downtown Lincoln.

International Contact Lens

WHAT IS CONTACT LENS CARE?

Here's what they taught us at International:

1. Contact lens care is the diagnosis, treatment and management of the eyes prescribing contact lenses as the therapy of choice.
2. Contact lens care demands a thorough knowledge of corneal physiology, anatomy and disease. It requires time, patience and compassion by doctors who constantly upgrade their knowledge and skills through continuing education.
3. Contact lens care is the most complex of all vision care. An extensive visual analysis, detailed evaluation of eye structures, and professional judgement as to proper lens type and suitability to the physiology of the eye are of utmost importance. The success of contact lenses depends on proper patient education in cleaning, insertion, removal, wetting, and sterilization of the lenses, and learning to respect them as an optical prescription worn on the eye.
4. Contact lens care is not a single experience but a continuing evaluation of vision, the integrity and stability of the lenses and, most important, the health of the external tissues of the eye for as long as the patient wears lenses. They really care about that at INTERNATIONAL!
5. Contact lens care is not a technical procedure but a professional responsibility that must be performed by qualified licensed professionals. And with the popularity of extended wear contact lenses, that responsibility is even greater.
