Lionel Richie

Richie show . . .

The only fault in Richie's show was the Diana Ross video tape that accompanied "Endless Love." Ross was supposed to appear on a screen opposite of Richie, but if the projection did work, you couldn't see it if you were on the extreme sides of the stage. It would have been nice to hear more from Can't Slow Down, but "All Night Long" was the only song Richie played from that album.

But when you can pull as diverse an audience in age and race together for at least 90 minutes as Richie did Saturday, you have to believe he didn't need to spend a lot of time hawking a new album. Besides, part of the appeal was singing along with all those old songs, and Richie must have known that. He seemed to enjoy it as much as anyone there.

HOTSPOTS

Television

• Mary Tyler Moore, Timothy Hutton and Donald Sutherland star in the 1980 film "Ordinary People" tonight at 8 on Channel 3. The film was directed by Robert Redford. When it was first released, this gripping adaptation of Judith Guest's novel was seen as a breakthrough both for Moore, playing a dramatic role after years of situation comedy, and for Redford, who made his directorial debut. Redford and Hutton won Academy Awards for their efforts.

Radio

• Zubin Mehta leads the New York Philharmonic tonight at 8 on KUCV (90.9 FM). Among tonight's performers are the Westminster Choir and the New York Choral Society.

At the Sheldon

• The American Independent film Series wraps up today after a weekend of fine viewing. Today's films include "Willmar 8" and "Until She Talks" (3 p.m.), "Two Worlds of Angelita" (5 p.m.), "Joe's Bed-Stuy Barbershop" and "Possum Living" (7 p.m.) and "Dark End of the Street" (9 p.m.).

On Stage

• David Freeman's "Jesse and the Bandit Queen" returns to the Studio Theatre stage tonight through Saturday. Tickets to the play are $4 for students, 45 for the general public.

The women tried all aspects of their newly discovered animus; they found it exhilarating, life-enhancing, but also a burden to drag around with them. The symbols hit full-force until the last: the women thrashed their skirts, finally shaking out the dusty misconceptions of what it is to be a woman.

Moving bodies to move minds is a difficult task, but the Ohio Ballet seemed to do it effortlessly.

Lend A Helping Head!

Be a volunteer tutor! The Educational Learning Center is looking for students who are willing to give an hour or two per week to help fellow students who may be in the middle of a life and death struggle with a particular course.

BENEFITS: You won't get a penny, BUT YOU WILL . . .

- *Receive the chance to help a fellow student in an area you have already done well in.
- *Have an opportunity to make an invaluable impact on someone's life.
- *Learn great things about the joy of giving freely.
- *Build your resume.
- *Receive the chance to build a supportive relationship with someone who needs your help.

COME ON . . . Can you afford an hour or two per week?

Stop by the Educational Learning Center, 7005 Selleck and fill out a volunteer tutor form. For more information call Pat at 472-5148 or 472-1481.

YOU'LL BE GLAD YOU DID!
