

Adler to lecture on noted humanist

Mortimer Adler, author, philosopher and teacher, will lecture tonight at 7:30 in the Nebraska Union to celebrate the 100th birthday of Jose Ortega y Gasset.

Adler's lecture, "Ortega y Gasset: The Educator of the Twentieth Century," will be followed by a panel discussion. The lecture is free and open to the public.

Adler currently is director of the Institute for Philosophical Research; chairman of the Board of Editors of Encyclopedia Britannica; associate editor of the Encyclopedia Britannica's "Great Books of the Western World" and editor in chief of "Annals of America."

Ortega y Gasset is recognized as one of the greatest humanists and philosophers of all time. Born in Madrid, Spain in 1883, he was a distinguished critic of art and literature, philosopher, historian, essayist and sociologist.

Some of his most important works in English translation are "Meditations on Quijote" (1914), "The Spectator," (eight volumes between 1916 and 1934), "Spain Invertebrate," (1921), and "The Subject of Our Times," (1923).

Foreign student savers face 'issue of survival'

By Stacie Thomas

The situation concerning foreign students who had money in the closed Commonwealth Savings Company is uncertain this week while the UNL International Educational Studies Office assesses the problem.

The bank was declared insolvent Nov. 1 and was taken over by the state Department of Banking.

Dolores Dege, an international student adviser for IES said no action has been taken but there is a committee studying the problem. Dege would not disclose any other information about the committee.

Dege said the IES office has compiled a list of the names of the students who were depositors at the bank and the amount of money each student had on deposit at Commonwealth.

Peter Levitov, director of the IES office, said the situation may be "an issue of survival, especially for students with families."

He said foreign students are not eligible to receive any public assistance because the students must support themselves to preserve their visa status.

Mary Boschult, assistant administrator for the Lancaster County Social Services office, said that although foreign students are not eligible for public assistance, the Social Services office is sometimes able to match foreign students with someone in the community who is willing to help the student.

Levitov said he advises foreign students to ask special permission of the Immigration Department to work off-campus. Foreign students are only allowed to work off-campus in emergency situations caused by unforeseen circumstances, he said.

Many of the students may not be affected until second semester when tuition payments are due and they don't have the money, Levitov said. Foreign students are in violation of their visa status if they are not registered for school and one consequence of that violation could be deportation.

Deportation would only occur after a deportation hearing and Levitov said that hopefully an alternate remedy for the situation could be found before the hearing.

Soala Ariweriokuma, president of the UNL International Students Organization, said he doesn't think deportation is likely in this situation.
