

Gold heist . . .

"I don't know," I reply, "did I hear you say that you're going to share your haul with us — no catch?"

"Yes, me las. Jus' to show you the RIA isn't a bad lot. We know the Mid-west is a political stron' 'old in the U.S. 'n 'ope ta gain some favor."

"Wait a minute, why are you telling me this?" I questioned, "Surely you don't want me to tell everyone about this. What would people think if the university was operating on stolen funds? And what's the guarantee that we'll get the changes we need?"

"Aye lass, 'n that's your role. Sway the Mid-west in our favor without spillin' the beans 'n we'll be grateful" he explained, "It'll be our li'l secret — between you, the RIA and Chancellor Massengale."

"The Chancellor? Won't he announce it?"

"Nay, las, 'e won't want to" replies UNL's lifeline. "N that's our 'old. 'E's got to treat this 'ot potatoe in the right way, or ya come out with the plot."

It was all clear to me. Blackmail. I think about press ethics, I think about my morals, I think about mom and apple pie.

Then I think about the cost of tuition, rent payments, food, maybe a new car and a glamorous wardrobe. If I work this right . . .

"How much does it cost to ship a ton of gold?" I asked. "... Express."

Silence outrageous

How would you feel if someone committed a crime against you, but after the court found him guilty, they refused to tell you what sentence he was given?

That is precisely what UNL Chancellor Massengale is doing in the recently publicized sex discrimination committed by UNL Police Chief Gail Gade and Lt. John Burke. After an investigation by a neutral outside party, UNL affirmative action officer Bradley Munn found Gade and Burke guilty of sex discrimination. And because the University Police Department has a long history of similar discriminatory behavior, Munn recommended substantial penalties for Gade and Burke — five days suspension without pay for Gade and three days for Burke.

Massengale admitted that the discrimination did occur, but then refused to tell anyone whether he would follow the recommendations to suspend Gade and Burke. In fact, we do not know if any penalties at all were ordered by Massengale.

This is an outrageous situation. What is the point of filing a discrimination complaint, investing huge amounts of time and risking one's job, if you never will be told what action is taken when you win your complaint?

Grade report plan

I want to thank Jill Kelley and the Daily Nebraskan for the article in the Nov. 23 issue concerning our plan to distribute first-semester grade reports on campus rather than mailing them to home addresses as we have in the past. This type of publicity is important because the plan will succeed only with the cooperation and support of our students.

To ensure this cooperation and support, I would like to add a few points in the information given in the article.

Since grades are not available until Jan. 9, they would not be mailed until late on the 10th or possibly as late as the 11th. Many students are back on campus, or on the way back, by the time these grade reports reach their home addresses. Students who are going through general registration or drop/add often need their grade reports before they can proceed. Even students who do not need grades for this purpose may have other needs for them or would just like to have them without the delay of writing home to ask Mom and Dad to send them back. Keeping the grade reports here, I believe, better serves the needs of our students.

Another point concerns the saving of $4,000. This savings will be realized only if we have the full cooperation of students. If we are able to save this amount even once each year, the money may help to save some other service that otherwise would be lost.

As the article pointed out, having grade reports available to students should lessen the work load for the employees in Student Records, giving them more time to provide the services that are so critical at that time of the year. With the help of all concerned, the benefits reaped will be multiple.

Students, for your benefit as well as ours, let me re-emphasize the information given in Jill's article and correct an error (not hers — mine). Grade reports will be available at Window 5 in the Administration Building only on Jan. 9, 1 to 5 p.m. and Jan. 10, 7:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Jan. 11 through 13 and 16 through 20, 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., they will be available in the multipurpose room in the basement of the center section of Selleck Quadrangle. Signs will be posted directing you to that room and back out of the building. During busy times it will be important to follow directions so you move with the traffic flow. The grade report clerk will quickly hand you your grade report upon presentation of your student ID card.
