RHA parking forum views lot slot policy

Many students seek involvement in various organizations to make them feel a part of university life, however many may find themselves on a list that no one wants to be a part of — the UNL police impoundment list for cars with overdue tickets.

Lt. John Burke, who is in charge of parking for the UNL police, said about 2,500 cars are on the impoundment list and "chances are sooner or later it (a car on the list) will be impounded."

This is just one word of advice Burke gave during a Resident Hall Association-sponsored public forum on parking in the Nebraska Union Tuesday.

Doug Stoer, Abel Hall president and member of RHA's parking committee, said the forum was intended to inform students about current police parking policies, and encourage communication between the students and the various parking boards and committees.

Burke discussed current UNL parking policies and presented changes that have been made.

Burke said that buying a permit does not guarantee a parking spot, but that contrary to popular opinion, all the spaces are never filled.

He said the department sold some 3,200 permits this year, which is about the same number of parking places on campus.

He said some lots are seldom used, such as the lot directly east of the police department office, one at 14th and New Hampshire streets, and one at 19th and R streets.

He also said the lots east of 19th Street have now been converted for use by people with either a Lot 1 or Lot 2 permit. The lot previously was only for Lot 1 permit holders.

Burke also suggested that students with questions or problems with parking enforcement should take their concerns to the Parking Advisory Board, the Parking Appeals Board or the RHA parking committee.

About 40 people attended the forum, many of them RHA members, but Stoer said the forum might help the RHA by making representatives more aware of the parking policies and problems.
