To recreate students must prove selves

For disciplinary and security reasons, students must now present a current UNL I.D. in order to gain admission to any of the five open recreational areas on campus.

Jerry Howe of the Recreation Department said the rule will be strictly enforced beginning immediately, because of several incidents involving non-students this semester. The five areas effected are Schulte Fieldhouse, Mabel Lee Hall, the Coliseum, the East Campus Activity Building, and Men's Physical Education.

Huskers vie with Cyclones in swim dual

Nebraska men's swimming Coach Cal Bentz would like to see the Huskers continue their recent mastery of Iowa State in their 3 p.m. Saturday dual in the Sports Center pool, but he'd also like his team to gain consistency.

"Coming off a weekend with two losses, we need to win," Bentz said. "We need to swim faster and get more consistent performances."

The ISU dual will serve as an indicator for the remainder of the season, Bentz said.

The Huskers have defeated Iowa State in duals the past two seasons, although the Cyclones lead the 56-meet series 47-9.

"Nebraska and Iowa State began as the leaders in the conference," Bentz said. "Iowa State then became the dominant team through much of the history of our sport in the conference."

A pair of returning Big Eight champions enhance the Cyclones' chances. Senior Bart Thomas is a two-time champion in the 100-meter breaststroke, while sophomore Scott McCadam won the 100 freestyle title.

Bentz said Nebraska swimmers won't be attempting to qualify for the NCAA championships in Saturday's dual.

"We're not in a position where we can qualify unshaved, and we're not going to shave," he said.

At 1-3, "our dual season looks pretty bleak," Bentz said. "A win brings us to 2-3 on the year. It's important in that respect."
