Scheele said the $19,197 increase will bring the total student hourly wage budget request to $140,312, which will be divided to pay students working in intramurals and special events, open recreation, and outdoor recreation.

Scheele said the $2,665 proposal for raising the classification and wage scale developed by the Financial Aids Office. It will result in a 20 cent per hour increase in pay per official.

"This is certainly something they (the officials) are deserving of," Scheele said. "Officiating is difficult — it takes a lot of skill, both physical and mental, and requires training."

Scheele said the $6,535 expanded programming proposal includes longer seasons for intramural teams, and expansion of new activities that have been more popular than anticipated.

More supervisors are needed because of the proposed increase of open recreation hours in the Coliseum, the Men's Physical Education building, 313 Mabel Lee Hall, Schulte Field House, and the coliseum weight room, Scheele said.

The increases in open recreation will result in a 1984-85 budget proposal of $73,408, including $66,396 for building supervisors and lifeguards, $1,260 for an office aide, and $5,752 for improved groundskeeping.

Students get into the ACT(S)

College students may have a chance to perform for the entertainment industry through the American Collegiate Talent Showcase.

ACTS, now in its third year, has helped students sign with talent agencies, appear in road shows and travel on overseas tours. Past winners have appeared in concert with noted television entertainers and made special appearances on national television.

Karen Rogan, ACTS student program director at

New Mexico State University in Las Cruces, N.M., said last year three Nebraskans were among the seven finalists.

Nebraska finalists were Eddy Winqest, a UNL student who played the keyboards, and Karen and Diane Coover, Peru State College students, who sang gospel songs.

Last year's winner, ventriloquist Jeff Dunham of Baylor University, appeared in concert with comedians Bob Hope and Milton Berle and also appeared in NBC's Fantasy.

Dunham was awarded $3,000.

Rogan said Alabama and Barbara Mandrell are among artists who have recently joined Journey, Chuck Mangione, Hope and others in support of ACTS.

Categories of entertainment include dance, drama, classical and contemporary music, including rock and roll bands.

The ACTS National Finals will take place April 14, and will culminate a week-long seminar in entertainment-related workshop sessions taught by many of the final judges. The workshop is open to any interested persons. Those who attend may receive one college credit hour in music or business by attending.

Deadline for entries is March 6. Students should submit their entries on audio or video cassette tapes. Preliminary judging will take place March 15 through 18 at New Mexico State University.
