

Intramural stars led by former Huskers

By Jeff Carr

The competition in the men's intramural basketball open league may be better than ever this year. Familiar names dot the rosters of almost every team.

Harper Seven's team includes former Huskers Claude Renfro and Lenard Johnson. Renfro, a 6-6 forward from Winslow, Ariz., scored nine points per game and led Coach Moe Iba's team in rebounding last year when they made the final four of the NIT.

Johnson scored five points and grabbed three rebounds per game.

"We've been winning most of our games by 20 to 30 points and we haven't really been pushing," said team spokesman Pat Albright.

According to Albright, Renfro and Johnson are the only players who start every game. But the team includes other good players. Jay Braun, a 6-0 guard who played high school ball in Colorado must also be considered one of the top players in the league.

Dunks Unlimited is currently 5 -0 and some observers predict they will win the showdown with Harper Seven when they play Thursday night. Dunks Unlimited has players who have proven themselves in Nebraska Class A high school basketball.

Clete Blakeman, a 6-2 freshman quarterback on the Cornhusker football team, leads the list of players who come from schools like Norfolk, Lincoln Northeast, Kearney and Bellevue East. Blakeman averaged more than ten points a game for a Norfolk team that was rated second in the state for much of last season. Other ex-Panthers on the team include 6-5 Mike Hoefler and 6-5 John Cook.

Another reason for the team's success is Mark Diaz, a starter on the Northeast state championship team two years ago.

"We have the speed to run and gun, but we can slow it down," said team member Jeff Norblade. "It just depends how we feel that night."

The toughness of the league has forced some teams to drop out, but one team that won't be intimidated is Bob's Boys. The team is made up of the defensive backs on the Husker football team. The players include Dave Burke, who played high school basketball in Utah, Neil Harris, who played high school ball in Kansas City and Gary Schneider, a second-string safety, who played at O'Neill, Neb. According to the Recreation Office, Mike McCashland is also a member of the team.

Bob's Boys had a chance to play Harper Seven on Super Bowl Sunday, but forfeited.

"We took a lot of ribbing about missing the game," said team coach Matt Strasburger.

Other league members include the Iguanas, Vitale's Bar and Grill, The Aces, Bud's Boys and Around the Corners.
