

Husker women travel to Oklahoma State

By Ward W. Triplett III

Nebraska basketball Coach Kelly Hill thought she would be in Norman, Okla. for the first round of the Big Eight basketball tournament.

But after the Sooners beat the Huskers 97-79 Saturday and Oklahoma State upset Kansas 67-66 in Lawrence, the Cowgirls claimed third place and the right to host sixth-place Nebraska at 7:30 p.m.

Both OSU and OU finished 8-6 in the conference, but Oklahoma State earned the higher bid since it defeated second-place Missouri.

In other games, Iowa State, 0-14, will face Kansas State, 12-2, in Manhattan. K-State won the conference championship with a 100-84 victory against Missouri Saturday. Missouri, 12-2, will host 3-11 Colorado, and Oklahoma will host 7-7 Kansas. The four winners will play Friday in the semifinals in Kansas City.

Hill said a 85-73 victory against the Cowgirls in Lincoln should give the team confidence.

"We're all pretty pleased to be in Stillwater," Hill said. "We've beaten Oklahoma State once, and we played them close here (85-73). I think our players are pretty confident they can win."

Oklahoma State center Kathy Schultz scored 52 points in the two games, and had 22 points in the OSU victory against Kansas.

"Obviously, we've got to stop Schultz," Hill said. "We're going to try a box and one against her, and try to keep (Jackie) Glossen off the boards."

Terri Parriott, 5-11 junior, will be assigned to the 6-1 Schultz, Hill said.

OSU Coach Dick Halterman brought four of the starters from his Moberly Junior College championship team with him when he started at OSU this season. Shultz and Glossen and a third, Candy Hicks, stepped into the starting lineup immediately, and what was a 4-23 team last year is 15-9 this season.

"We feel we had a good season and we have turned the program around," Halterman said.

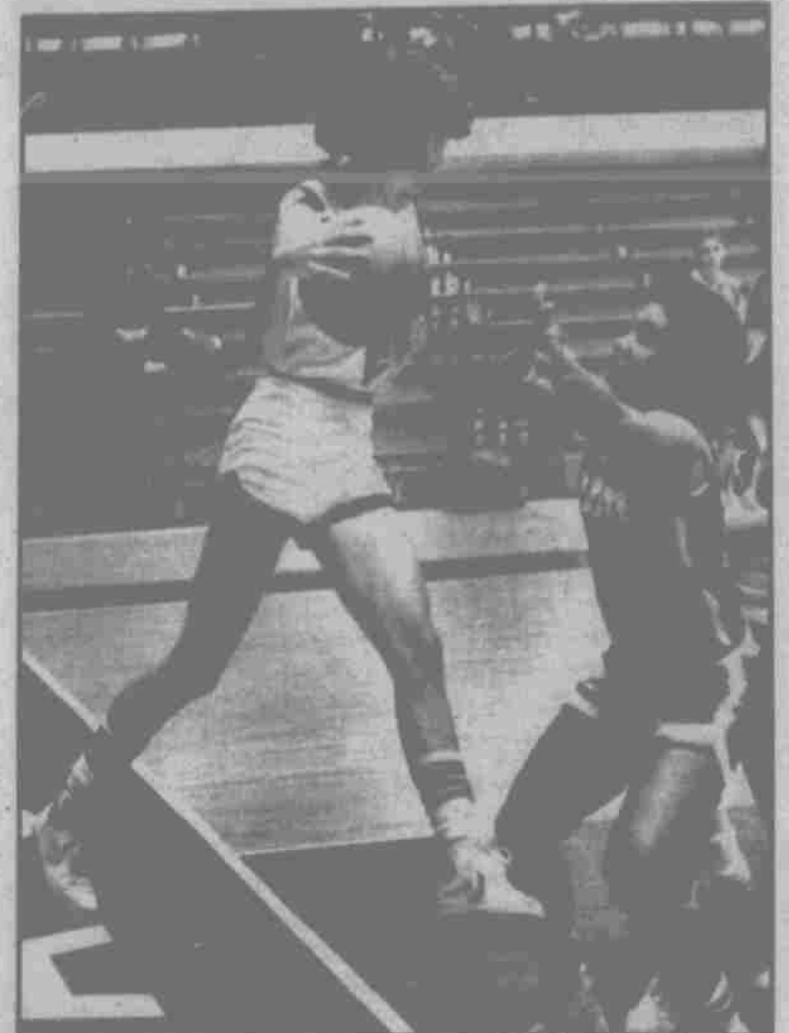

"We started the season with a goal of finishing in the top half of the Big Eight, which we have done, and a 20-win season. By beating Nebraska, we would get 18 wins. We would have to win the Big Eight tournament to get 20, and that's going to be tough with Missouri and Kansas State there."

To beat Nebraska, Halterman said the Cowgirls will need to play a man-to-man defense.

"They're one of the tougher teams in the conference to defense because they pass the ball around so well outside the zone. They'll keep passing until they find the open girl."

Halterman said the Cowgirls can stay with Nebraska's running game, even without Hicks. The 5-7 sophomore, who kept OSU in the first Nebraska game with 4 of 5 outside shooting, quit the team last Friday. Last year's starting point guard, sophomore Christa Troester, started the Kansas game and hit six of 10 shots.

Nebraska's Debra Powell, who is averaging 18.2 points per game, was named to the first team All-Big Eight team. The 5-9 junior from East St. Louis, Ill., was joined by Joni Davis, a 6-0 junior from Missouri, Diane Hiemstra, a 5-11 senior from Colorado, and Kansas players Angie Snyder, a 5-10 senior and Vickie Adkins, a 6-0 sophomore.

Nebraska's Kelli Benson saves the ball from going out of bounds in a game against Kansas State earlier this season. Tonight Benson and the Huskers play Oklahoma State in the Big Eight tournament.

Men wrestlers will compete at 126, 134, 142, 150 and 158 tonight. They will begin weighing in at 6 p.m.

Weigh-ins begin at 6 p.m. Wednesday for women at 167, 177 and unlimited and for men at 167, 177, 190, 203 and unlimited. Finals are Thursday evening.

Community, UNL suffer loss of fierce competitor Moore

Like so many college graduates, Jack Moore's life was filled with potential — potential that Moore never lived to attain.

Early Saturday morning, a plane carrying Moore and his boss, stockbroker Gary Johnson, crashed 17 miles north of Cozad. After a 36-hour search, their bodies were found Sunday night.

Most Nebraskans knew Moore best as the 5-9 guard on the Cornhusker basketball team from 1978 to 1982. An All-Big Eight player as a senior, Moore received the 1982 Naismith Award, given to the best player in the nation less than six feet tall.

Moore was at his best in pressure situations, especially standing at the free throw line. He made 90 percent of his free throws while at Nebraska, shattering school and conference records for accuracy.

Able to be a fierce competitor while giving a sense of stability, Moore led the Huskers to two appearances in the Big Eight's "Final Four" in Kansas City and a trip to the NIT in 1980.

After completing his athletic eligibility, Moore stayed in school, earning his degree in accounting in 1983. He had opportunities to remain in athletics, either as a professional player (he was a ninth-round draft choice of the Kansas City Kings before being cut in 1982) or as a coach.

Moore opted for the more secure world of finance, and he accepted Johnson's offer to join the North Platte office of E.F. Hutton.

Nebraska basketball Coach Moe Iba was a friend of both men, and he said Monday, "Jack was a tremendous basketball player for us, but more importantly he was a wonderful person and a great friend."

Nebraska has not lost just a former basketball star, but has lost a person who would have been an asset to his community and his alma mater.
