Communicators to plot their career courses with professionals' aid

People in the communications field and business communications students can plot their futures at the local International Association of Business Communicators spring conference.

"Communications: Charting Your Course" will take place April 5 at the Omaha Red Lion Inn. The conference is open to IABC members and non-members.

Paul Curro, president of the career management consulting firm of Curro and Associates, will present a six-step guide to career planning. Curro has advised more than 4,000 job-seekers through his firm.

Carol Hunter and Tim Rouse of the Futures Group, Inc. will lead a workshop about future environmental trends and their affects on business communication.

Other workshop speakers include John Wanzenreid from UNO; James Clemon of Bozell and Jacobs, Inc.; Meredith Young of Henningson, Durham and Richardson; and Alex Trice of Union Pacific Railroad.

The conference will include a luncheon. For more information, call Mike May of Farm Credit Banks in Omaha at 444-3380.
