Across town, in the west alley between 9th and 10th streets, is Lincoln's only remaining cobblestone street. Be careful not to drop anything down the cracks between the stones and as you leave, be a little thankful for asphalt.

Just across 9th Street from the alley stands the City Mission. The brochure said the building was originally a brothel owned by Lydia Stewart. She willed that the building be given to the city upon her death "so that her customers could continue using it."

I could go on and on about Lincoln's wonders, but why spoil future explorations? With the brochure and a few good friends, history becomes light and enjoyable.

This is one reason why the brochure was made, said Jeanne Baer, assistant director of the Convention and Visitors Bureau. Baer said she spent two years studying Lincoln and learning its stories.

Baer said that tours are for Lincoln tourists, and also residents. She said the brochure will be sent to people looking for a convention center and may draw people to the city because it makes Lincoln look like a safe, walkable place.

The brochures are free and will be available at the Tourist Information office at the corner of 9th and O streets between May 27 and Sept. 13.

Engineers honor UNL senior

UNL senior Mark Davidson last week was named the outstanding industrial engineering student in the nation by a national committee of industrial engineers.

Davidson, a 21-year-old industrial engineering major from McCook, will take center stage and claim his award along with a $300 first-place prize at the Institute of Industrial Engineers national convention in Chicago May 6 to 11.

"It's pretty exciting to be going to Chicago to receive this award," Davidson said. "I feel fortunate to have received good instruction at UNL."

But the trip to Chicago didn't happen overnight, he said. After being selected to represent UNL in the national competition, Davidson filled out a detailed application form, he said. The application included questions about participation in IIE and hobbies and asked for three letters of recommendation from university officials. Also, he said, the application asked about the student's participation in extra-curricular activities and grade point average.

Davidson said his university activities helped impress the Atlanta-based selection committee. Boasting a 3.9 GPA and having participated in New Student Orientation, the Innocents Society and UNL Student Alumni Association, Davidson was selected from about 65 university students across the nation. Davidson, also a Farmhouse fraternity member, said his dedication to the UNL chapter of IIE for which he served as president and oversaw the IIE regional conference in Lincoln last month, helped him earn the award.

Winning the award was not a total surprise, Davidson said. As a junior, he was selected as one of six national winners of the IIE Dwight Gardener award, which won him a $1,500 prize. "I thought I did have a chance to win this year," he said. "And I heard rumors before I was notified that I won, because the department chairman was notified earlier than I was."

"I had such great support from UNL faculty and students," Davidson said. He said four other UNL students have received the IIE Dwight Gardener award. "UNL helped me keep a good perspective."

Shortly after Davidson leaves Chicago, he will marry Cindy Saylor, a UNL senior from Omaha. After the wedding, the couple will move to Kansas City, where Davidson has already accepted a job with Hallmark Cards Corporation as an industrial engineer for the corporate engineering department.
