U.S. and Sandinist diplomats confer

MEXICO CITY — Against a background of skepticism and mutual mistrust, Nicaragua and the United States began talks Monday on policy differences that lie at the root of an insurgent campaign to overthrow Nicaragua's government. Tight security was in force and the press was kept at bay as Nicaraguan Deputy Foreign Minister Victor Hugo Tinoco and Washington's special ambassador to Central America, Harry Shlaudeman, met in the Pacific resort town of Manzanillo, 518 miles west of Mexico City.

The talks followed a surprise visit to Nicaragua on June 1 by Secretary of State George Shultz. The U.S. government kept silent on the meeting.

Mexico, which hosted the meeting, has been active in diplomatic efforts to defuse Central America's crises. Mexican Foreign Minister Bernardo Sepulveda greeted the participants but did not sit in on their talks.

The talks in Manzanillo coincided with reports of fresh fighting between Sandinist troops and rebels of the Nicaraguan Democratic Force (FDN), the biggest of the U.S.-backed rebel groups. An FDN communique issued in Honduras, the operational base of most of the insurgents, said the rebels had killed 65 Nicaraguan troops in an ambush 75 miles south of the Honduran border.

Meanwhile, in Washington Monday night, the Senate bowed to the House of Representatives and stripped $21 million in extra 1984 aid for anti-Sandinist guerrillas in Nicaragua from a $1.1 billion supplemental spending bill. The 88-1 vote was a defeat for President Reagan, who had indicated he would veto the measure if funds for rebels seeking to overthrow the leftist Managua government were deleted.

Mondale makes amends

NORTH OAKS, Minn. — Leading Democratic presidential contender Walter Mondale will hold a breakfast meeting Tuesday in New York City with his top rival, Colorado Sen. Gary Hart, Mondale aides said Monday. The meeting comes after weeks of speculation about a reconciliation between Mondale and Hart, who Friday said he would continue working for the nomination. During a week-long stay at his home here, the former vice president has indicated a general willingness to meet with Hart if it could produce concrete results toward reconciliation. The site and time of tomorrow's meeting was unknown.

French philosopher dies

PARIS — French philosopher Michel Foucault, a leading intellectual whose works explored Western culture's approach to social deviance over the centuries, died Monday at the age of 57, hospital sources said. His publisher, Editions Gallimard, said the cause of death was not immediately known. He had been admitted to a Paris hospital 10 days ago for treatment of a neurological disorder.

Foucault was best known abroad for his first major work, "Madness and Civilization," which examined society's need to define its limits by categories such as reason and madness and the birth of the insane asylum as an institution of exclusion. Other works included "Discipline and Punish: The Birth of the Prison," "The Archaeology of Knowledge," and most recently a three-volume "History of Sexuality." Critics heralding the publication last week of the last two volumes of that work described Foucault as a moralist, stylist and esthete who had taken the place of the late Jean-Paul Sartre as the leading philosopher in France.

Traffic jammed in Peru

LIMA, Peru — Peruvian Maoist Guerrillas blew up a key railroad bridge last weekend, suspending rail traffic from the capital to the central part of the country, officials said Monday. A national rail company spokesman said damage was so extensive at the Infernillo train bridge that repair crews would have to work at least two weeks to restore normal train service. The destruction of the bridge 75 miles west of here was part of the Sendero Luminoso (Shining Path) weekend offensive that hit at least 10 towns and killed up to 40 people, police said.
