new album is the strongest of the nine found here.

John Waite falls short of his potential on his new album No Breaks.

The potential that the album and this artist display is not done justice by the music actually found here. With Gary Myrick on guitar and Curly Smith behind the drum kit, Waite has put together a good studio band. But the sparse production leaves the edge off of No Breaks.

Before heading out on his own with 1982's Ignition, Waite spent time as the frontman with the Babys and after a handful of albums, had charted several times with songs like "Isn't It Time," "Walkaway," "Midnight Rendezvous" and "Everytime I Think of You."

While Waite shares producing credits with David Thoener and Gary Gersh, I think that the next time around he should take full control.

Waite has again displayed his radio hit potential with the summer smash "Missing You." Unfortunately, that track off the
