Pettit: 'Might be our year'

By Ward W. Triplett III
Daily Nebraskan Sports Editor

The record is the university's most impressive. It would take the football team five or more Big Eight championships to equal the conference domination the Huskers have had in volleyball since the first conference tournament in 1975.

It may take more than five since coach Terry Pettit, as another famous redheaded coach on campus seems to do, always replaces his losses with even stronger players who just keep the ball rolling. Plus, five starters return from last year's 29-4 team, which finished the season ranked as the seventh-best team in the nation. "I think that this might be our year," Pettit says, sitting in his award-cluttered office in the coliseum. "That's not to say last year wasn't a good year."

Last year looked a lot like Nebraska's year all season. The Huskers trounced Big Eight competition, won three invitationals, including the San Diego State tournament over a host of West Coast schools. Things looked good until the NCAA sent the Huskers to Kalamazoo, Mich., for a first-round tournament game, despite Nebraska's regional second seed behind UCLA. Western Michigan won the match in four sets in front of the largest crowd ever to see an NCAA volleyball match, about 8,340 people. The suspicion of a large crowd was the reason for the unfriendly court assignment.

Pettit lost four-time all-conference player Erin Dean from that team. But this might still be the year since the returnees include sophomore Karen Dahlgren, who set several block records last season; junior Annette Adamszak, an outside hitter who made the all-Big Eight team a year ago; junior Sharon Kramer, another conference and regional stand-out; and setter Mary Buysse, a junior whom Pettit said several times last season was playing as well as any setter in the nation.
