Last week, McDugan met Miss Mona and thought she was a man. After an ear-bashing, McDugan decided to help Mona solve the murder of her father McDugan took liberties with Mona, and she slapped the spit out of him. He took the job away.

McDugan McGruder felt a special throbbing as he moved down the streets of Gotham City with Miss Mona Munning. There she was, his centerfold dream only two feet and a half a heart beat away. Her knickers showed delicate calf muscles that moved down to her ankle, giving her Achilles' tendon a strong and sensual presence. McDugan loved the way her shoulder blades chopped back and forth with every move of her hips.

"Where we gonna sate our hunger, Mr. McGruder?" Mona's head swung his way and that chin stuck out.

"I don't think they sell what I desire." McDugan ran his fingers through his hair and the wrinkles under his eyes grew deeper as he smiled.

"What is it you desire, Mr. McGruder?" Miss Mona's finger ran across her lips.

"What do you think? Tell me what I want.?? McGruder crossed his toes and hoped she knew his passion.

"Mmm. Let me concentrate." She stuck her arms out and closed her eyes. McDugan guided her out of the way of a man selling bird whistles. "Ah, yes. I'm getting a picture." Miss Mona opened her left eye a crack and saw McDugan waiting for her answer. "Hot dogs. Yes. Definitely hot dogs."

"Food?" McDugan's jowl dropped and he let go her arm.

"Yes! A Nathan's hot dog! With relish, kraut and onions!" As luck would have it, Miss Mona was right in front of famous Nathan's and she laughed. "And here we sure are! I'm starving, Mr. McGruder. We'll catch a bite here."

She led him to a table and he was upset.

"Yeah, ah Miss Mona. What's going on with your murder?"

"Oh. Well I've been receiving death threats. That's why I tapped your ear the other day. A man calls me up and tells me I'm next, so bring your shampoo for oily hair. That's when I always hang up. I don't have oily hair." Mona took a huge bite of her footlong.

"That's a clue. Oily hair. Now what about your father's death?"

"I got a phone call from my father. He was screaming and telling me to sell the salt mines and never eat anything from Ireland again. Then the beeps."

"Beeps? I don't get the beeps." McDugan held back a burp and continued. "Describe beeps."
