Downed computer stops drop/add; workers turn UNL students away

About 100 students were turned away from the drop/add line Wednesday after a computer malfunction forced workers to stop the entire drop/add process.

Ted Pfeifer, director of registration and records, said the computer's software package that manages the regulating system "failed to operate."

About 400 students were affected, Pfeifer said.

The computer failed about 1 p.m., Pfeifer said, and again at 3 p.m. The first time was minor, he said, but the second time operation could not be restored.

Pfeifer said students who were inside the Nebraska Union ballroom (drop/add room) when the breakdown occurred, were issued time appointment cards and would maintain their same positions when drop/add opened Thursday at 8 a.m.

Thursday's drop/ad was hectic, Pfeifer said, "with two days of business at once," he said.

The drop/add room will remain open every day this week until 4 p.m. and again next week on Tuesday and Wednesday until 4 p.m.
