Christian singers . . .

Having just returned last month from a tour of New Zealand and other points south, Grant and her band, which included husband Gary Chapman on guitar and keyboardist-singer Michael W. Smith, did not show any signs of the weariness or struggle they spoke of. Grant entered the stage after a cappella opening prayer from Chapman and back-up singers Renea Garcia and Donna McElroy. She began the 2 1/2 hour set with songs from her last two albums, Age to Age and Straight Ahead.

It was also a loud opening as Christian music refuses to pretend its listeners are any more tone-weary than the Huey Lewis crowd. While some elderly fans cowered, though, the younger set was with Grant from the beginning.

Grant promised early to sing a lot since "I don't talk very well." She urged the crowd to "burb, bark or gargle along," even if they knew only a few words.
