Willcox said he could not get enough members to live in the house because "it was a dump."

"It's not fit for humans to live there," he said.

Willcox said the fraternity chapter's reorganization began in September, 1983, when 55 new active members were signed up. By December, that number had dropped to 34, and by the end of school in May only 24 members were left, Willcox said.

The reorganized fraternity chapter "started to gel" in January, Willcox said, but the house's dismal condition drove active and potential members away.

"It's tough to compete against 26 completely active fraternities," the former president said.

The remaining members decided in July to quit unless the loan as promised came through, Willcox said.

"I'm not going to miss Delta Sigma Phi," Willcox said, "but I am going to miss the Greek system."
