'Bolero' bears bland bull

Review by Scott Harrah
 Daily Nebraskan Staff Writer

Hype and controversy intensify a film's box office appeal, as is the case with "Bolero," the new Bo Derek movie that initially was rated X.

After reconsideration, the film received an unprecedented warning instead of a rating. The ads state, "No one under 17 will be admitted to this film due to its adult nature."

Bo Derek stars as a giddy boarding school graduate who takes off to Morocco with her best friend and her chaperone — played by George Kennedy. Young Bo's only goal is to lose her virginity to an exotic sheik. So, she meets a sheik and lets the desert dreamboy eat milk and honey off of her nude body.

The sheik falls asleep and frustrates Bo, so she moves on to Spain where she meets a swarthy matador. He becomes her new obsession, and they eventually wind up in bed together. This movie was supposed to be erotic, but the sex scenes come off so phony and insincere that they're more of a turn off than a turn on. While losing her precious virginity, Bo's orgasmic facial expressions resemble that of a sick cow rather than a lascivious sexpot. The rest of the movie is full of vacuous action that leads up to nothing.

Toward the end, Bo is abducted by the sheik via his airplane. But she's so in love with her macho matador that she jumps out of the plane into the sea and swims back to her Latin lover. They have sex again — this time in a smoke-filled, phantasmagoric setting — complete with a Neon "Extasy" sign.

It appears John Derek wrote the screenplay for this reprehensive trash wallow so his wife would have a reason to strip and show her illustrious curves. Then he cashed in on the controversy that publicized the film and put Bo on magazine covers. Beneath all this hype and protest, his film, "Bolero," is nothing but bland bull.
