Students asked to skip meal

World Food Day is being observed today in recognition of the production and distribution of food and the needs of the world's hungry.

According to statistics released by Bread for the World, 150 million people are severely affected by food shortages in a drought that extends to 24 countries. The current famine in Africa has been called the worst of its kind in this century.

CARE, the international aid and development agency, is asking students and area residents to skip a meal today and send the proceeds to CARE. The purpose of the meal skip is to focus attention upon world food problems and the need for concerted action to provide solutions.

The day will be highlighted in Lincoln with a proclamation by Gov. Bob Kerrey at 11:30 a.m. in the East Union. Janet Poley, project adviser for training in rural development in Tanzania, will be present and deliver the keynote address at the World Food Day Convocation later in the afternoon.

Poley is a native of Nebraska City and UNL home economics graduate. The convocation begins at 1:15 p.m. in the East Union.

Also in Lincoln, Art Simon, co-founder and national executive director of Bread for the World, will address Lincoln pastors at the Lincoln Clergy Association at a noon luncheon today. Simon also will appear at an informal coffee hour at 4:30 p.m. at First United Methodist Church followed by a Third World supper at 6 p.m. Following the dinner, Bill Kerrey, staff assistant to the governor, will speak on world hunger issues as they relate to Nebraska. Proceeds from the supper will go to the Lincoln food pantry.

Simon will speak at a worship service at 7:30 p.m. with a coffee hour following at 8:30 p.m. Simon will sign copies of the revised edition of his book, "Bread for the World."

The public is invited to these events, which are sponsored by Bread for the World and Interchurch Ministries of Nebraska.

Union food service...

Whether they advertise or not, the unions do compete with other eating places for business. To do that, the unions' food service managers must be responsive to their customers, Pushcar said.

"We get a lot of feedback from customers," he said.

Much of that feedback comes through servers who get comments from customers, Pushcar said.

"Also, national magazines will tell you what the most popular items are," he said.

Apple pie, hamburgers and roast beef are three "must" items, he said.

Student eating habits have changed during the past 10 to 15 years, Pushcar said. People are becoming more calorie-conscious, and are eating lighter meals.

"People are eating more sandwiches and soups," he said. "There's been a big move away from the traditional Nebraska lunch."

The "traditional Nebraska lunch" includes meat, bread, milk and potatoes — not exactly a diet menu. Because of the trend toward lighter meals, the union sells fewer entrees than it used to, Pushcar said. Main entrees account for 35 percent of sales in the Harvest Room, compared with about 70 percent 10 to 15 years ago.

Friendship Home...

"Our problem is letting people know we're around here — and not letting others know," Kadavy said.

The home provides food and shelter for the women and their children. It also allows the women to get away from the stress in their own home. This break gives them a chance to make plans for their future.

Mary's stay at Friendship Home gave her the chance to rearrange her life.

"I made up my mind before I left that I was going to get out," she said. "This place gives you a lot of help — use it."

Mary did. By now she probably is on the road to Michigan — to home, where her family is. She said she is going to start all over again — "Maybe go back to school.

"Who knows, maybe I'll meet my knight in shining armor."

On Oct. 8, NBC featured the movie "The Burning Bed," a true story about spouse abuse, as part of National Domestic Violence Awareness Week. During the show, telephone numbers of local community crisis lines were displayed on the screen.

"After the show ran, and since then, the crisis centers in Lincoln and Omaha have had a lot more calls," Kadavy said.

Friendship Home has since filled to capacity. Kadavy said this could be because of the show.

But the most important thing is that more women are aware, Kadavy said.

"That's going to mean we'll get a lot more (clients)," Kadavy said. "Maybe in the future."
