ment, Reagan said that he will try to steer America away from "the weakness of the last four years."

The major issues debated by the candidates were:

- CIA activities — When challenged by Mondale, Reagan refused to confirm or deny his administration's guilt or innocence concerning the CIA guerrilla manual instructing guerrillas on the assassination of Nicaraguan counter-revolutionaries. Reagan said an investigation is being conducted. "We won't assign guilt without proper evidence," he said.

- Defense spending — Reagan charged Mondale with a history of weak postures on defense spending. Mondale answered that he planned to "make sure a dollar spent buys a dollar's worth of defense."

"When you spend $500 for a $5 hammer, that's not buying strength," he said.

- Terrorism in Lebanon — Reagan said U. S. troops in Lebanon were peace-keeping troops and never initiated military action.

"We did not engage in conduct that was out of line with our mission," Reagan said. "But I will never send troops anywhere on a mission of that kind without telling them that if somebody shoots at them they can darn well shoot back."

Reagan said he wanted to retaliate but only if his administration could "put our finger on the people responsible."

Mondale said the Reagan administration knew troops and diplomatic embassies were unsafe in Lebanon. He charged Reagan with negligence, both in defending U.S. citizens abroad and retaliating terrorist acts.

"The bottom line is the United States left humiliated and our enemies are strong," said Mondale.

- Age — When questioned by panelist Henry Trewhitt of the Baltimore Sun about his advanced age, Reagan said, "I will not make age an issue of this campaign. I am not going to exploit for political purposes my opponent's youth and inexperience."

- Star Wars — Reagan said he is proposing a defense weapon that would allow the United States to destroy Soviet missiles in space instead of destroying millions of people in the advent of nuclear war. Reagan said he would use such a defense weapon to convince the Soviets to sit at the bargaining table and stop the arms race. Reagan said he would share this Star Wars technology with the Soviets, in a show of trust, to prevent a nuclear war.

Such sharing would "inevitably involve the sharing of our most advanced computing and engineering technologies," Mondale responded.

"I do not trust the Russians," he said. "Why don't we stop this madness now and draw a line to keep the heavens free from war."
