Andy Schultz and another unidentified Bruce Springsteen fan huddle in the cold outside the Nebraska Union Wednesday. Many ticket-seekers brought tents, sleeping bags, overchairs and other provisions. Their hopes were dashed when it was announced at 5 p.m. that tickets would not be on sale until 7:30 a.m. Sunday. Two other fans, Joe Zychorski and his wife Patty, had hoped to get some tickets for friends coming into town.

The last minute announcement "rubbed" them wrong, he said, and they probably won't wait.

"If it was the Messiah, maybe," he said.

"Hey little girl standing on the corner/Today's your lucky day for sure all right."...Well, maybe not today...
